Now...enjoy sweet treats and protect your teeth from cavities

New white Ipana with WD-9 inhibits tooth-decay acids*

Now you can eat the sweet things you like—and need for quick energy, a balanced diet—and stop worrying about unnecessary cavities.

Many foods, including sweets, form tooth-decay acids. But now, with new white Ipana containing acid-inhibitor WD-9, you can guard your teeth against these acids.

For WD-9 in Ipana's exclusive new formula is one of the most effective ingredients known to prevent the formation of tooth-decay acids. Acid-inhibitor WD-9 is an active anti-enzyme and bacteria destroyer.

*To get the best results from new Ipana with acid-inhibitor WD-9, use it regularly after eating. Thus it acts before tooth-decay acids can do their damage.

Brushing with new Ipana after eating really works. A 2-year clinical test with hundreds who ate all the sweet things they wanted proved that brushing this way can prevent most tooth decay.

So remember, while no dentifrice can stop all cavities—you can protect teeth from sweet foods by brushing with new Ipana containing WD-9.

Don't cut down sweets ... do cut down cavities with new Ipana®

New minty flavor encourages children to brush teeth. No strong, medicinal taste in new Ipana with WD-9. And it makes your mouth so fresh and clean that even one brushing can stop most unpleasant mouth odor all day long.

I USE CHAMPION SPARK PLUGS
BECAUSE WEAK PLUGS WASTE POWER AND MONEY!"

says Sam Hanks

1953 AAA DRIVING CHAMPION

HERE'S WHY YOU NEED CHAMPIONS:

← INFERIOR OR WORN-OUT PLUGS waste gasoline because a weak spark does not ignite all the gas in the combustion chamber. Unburned gasoline goes out the exhaust.

PRECISION-BUILT CHAMPIONS → give a full-firing spark which burns all the gasoline and turns it into useful power, allowing your engine to perform properly.

Power begins at the spark plug. No engine can deliver maximum power and economy with faulty or weak plugs.

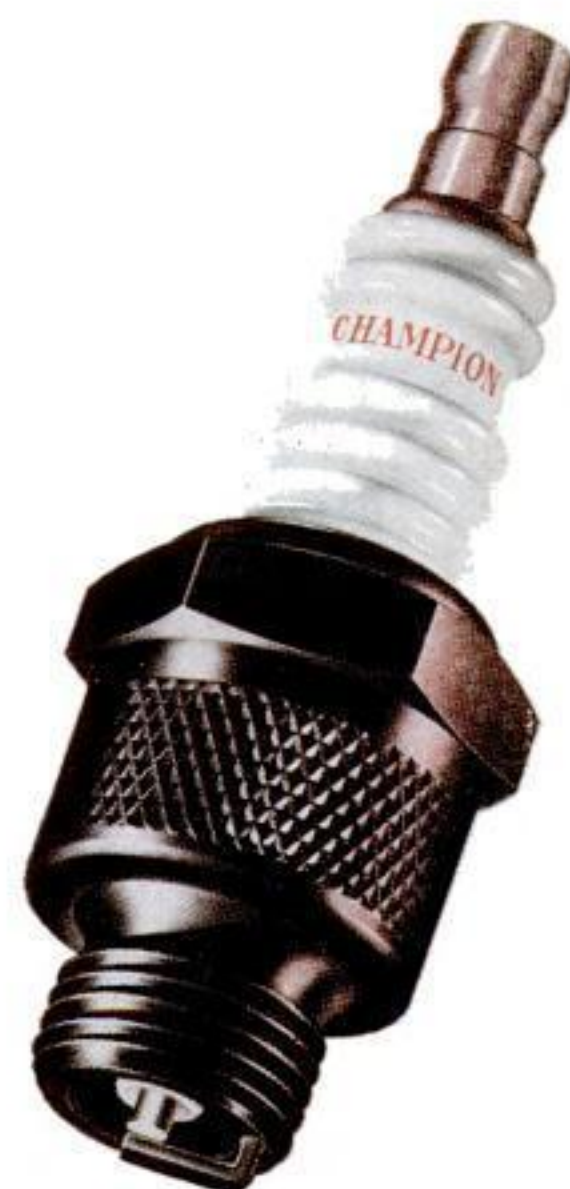

That's why Sam Hanks, named by the American Automobile Association as 1953's top driver, uses only Champions in his racing machines and in his family cars. Full-firing Champions' sharp steady spark puts every drop of your gasoline to work, giving you better performance and economy and saving you money every mile.

So, if inferior spark plugs are robbing you of gasoline economy, better let your neighborhood dealer install a set of precision-built Champions. They'll give you all the power you're paying for!

are very useful

Alexander Graham Bell - inventor
User of the telephone -

- A. Business calls 1. Groceries
 - B. Friendly calls 2. Medicines
 - C. Ordering calls 3. Meats
- Others, including military calls

(Tune - Yankee Doodle)

Telephones are very useful.
Of that we're aware.
So when you use the telephone -
Just handle it with care.

When some one is in trouble you can call up people to help you. If some one is sick you can call the doctor. And if your house is on fire you call the fire department.

Some of the most interesting illustrations of the value of the telephone come from children. Here are a few, selected from many hundreds by grade-school pupils. They show imagination and a characteristic way of telling a story in a few words. Take, for instance, the words "Telephones are very useful." We couldn't sum it up better than that in a hundred years.

As any riddle fancier can tell, the letters and drawings opposite represent a familiar LIFE headline: "Speaking of Pictures." This kind of picture puzzle, called a rebus and popularized by the French more than 300 years ago, is the special delight of Joseph Low, an artist who lives in Newtown, Conn.

Ever since he came upon a rebus book by Benjamin Franklin years ago, Low has been collecting old rebuses, including a children's rebus of Bible excerpts. Recently Low did a rebus book of his own, Mother Goose Riddle Rhymes (Harcourt, Brace; $2.50), which this month was selected by The American Institute of Graphic Arts as one of the best-designed books of 1953. LIFE here presents some samples from the book especially for the pleasure of children. For adults out of practice at puzzles and forgetful of nursery rhymes, LIFE offers clues to some of the relatively difficult pictures: the snaggle-toothed man is a hick; the animal that looks like a horse is an ass; the court attendants decorated with an A are "Great A" and "little a."

Some things you can see for yourself.

So by now, you must have discovered that Buick has turned a fresh new page in automotive styling—and we hope you find it as pleasing as thousands of others do.

But they didn't stop with styling—or with major advances in power and performance—and economy of operation.

All these got top attention from Buick engineers, and the results are certainly something to make any Buick owner glow with pleasure.

To all this was added one more challenge: What could be done to make still finer Buick's famed Million Dollar Ride?

Longer wheelbases helped. So did a heavier X-braced frame—and a new welded mounting of Buick's mighty V8 engines.

But the new magnificence in ride and handling that you feel in every 1954 Buick stems from artful changes in what the engineers call "front-end geometry."

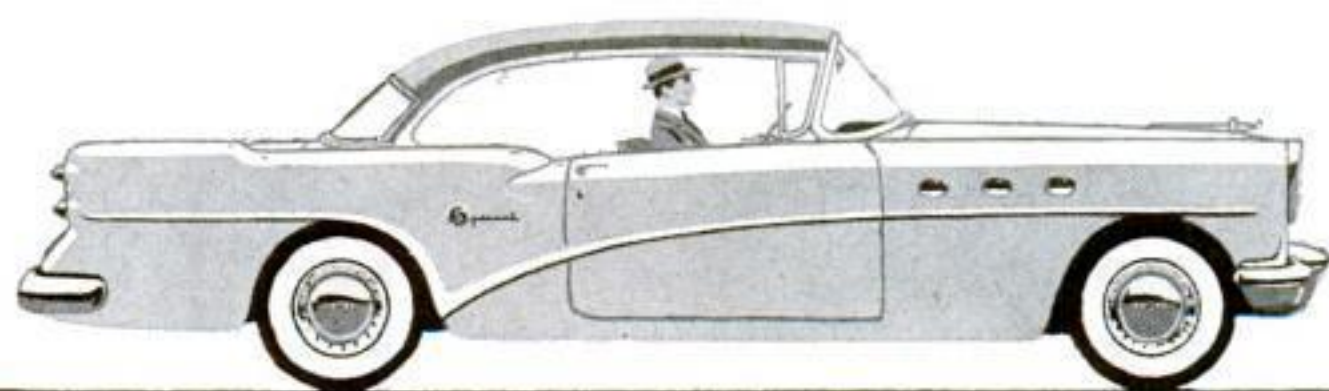

It sounds rather technical, but it got an amazing result. In the words of the engineers:

"We developed a new parallel linkage that maintains better directional stability and eliminates the tendency for road roughness to 'steer' the car."

"We found a way to hold front-wheel toe-in to almost zero change."

"We lowered over-all steering gear ratios to give quicker, easier steering with more positive response—even smothered still more the jar and jounce of ruts and ridges, with new direct-acting shock absorbers mounted inside the front coil springs."

Why don't you come in and see us—and try the result for yourself? We can show you a combination of beauty, power, performance and sheer pleasure that's the talk of the industry. And we're quoting mighty attractive prices.

THERE'S V8 POWER IN EVERY '54 BUICK

—and stepped up to the highest horsepowers, Series for Series, in all Buick history. Economy is up, too—with new Power-Head Pistons in every engine that make the most of high compression, and boost gas mileage to new highs.

Two locomotives couldn't break the New General Tire with Nygen Cord

Astounding Proof of Tire Strength

Two Baltimore & Ohio R. R. locomotives, weighing 329 tons and generating 4,500 hp., crushed this General Nygen Cord tire repeatedly. The rim was distorted, but the tire remained fully inflated, unharmed.

Tires today must be tremendously strong.

Your safety and the protection of those who ride with you require it.

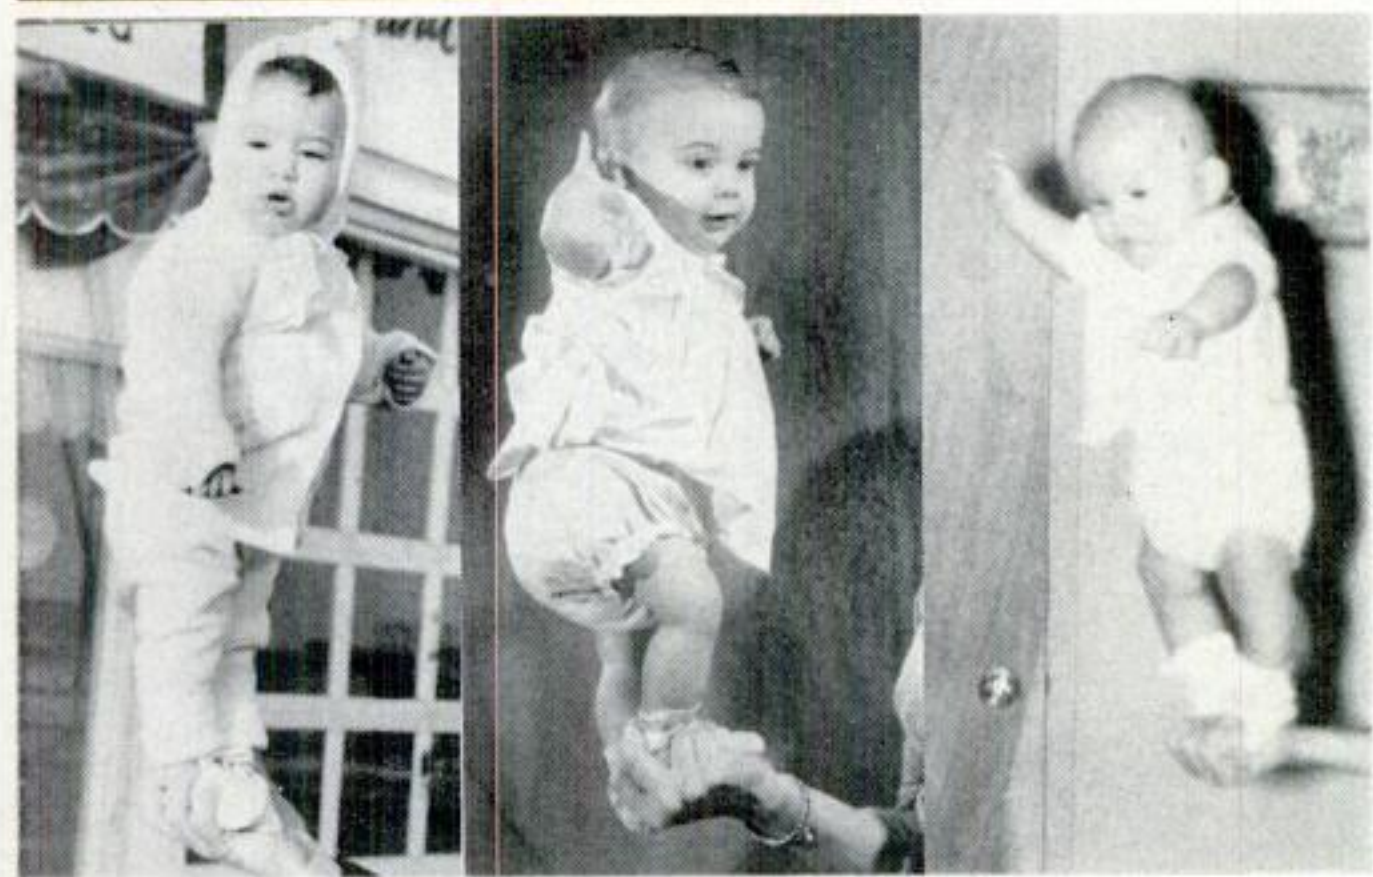

With known cord materials, the tire of ideal strength was impossible—without building it so heavy it would generate enough heat to cause blowouts.

General's research engineers have met this problem by developing an entirely new and stronger cord material—NYGEN, pound for pound stronger than steel cables!

To be safe at modern highway speeds, get long mileage, quick stopping and all the other desired features, see The General Tire with NYGEN Cord at your General Tire Dealer's.

A HANDY STUNT

Sirs:
My daughter Maxine and I were delighted with 1-year-old Johnny Medro (Picture of the Week, LIFE, March 29), who stood aloft on his circus performer-father's palm to see a St. Patrick's Day parade. We are merely Green performers, but our Maxine was only 6 months old when this picture of us (above) was taken recently.

KANSAS CITY—ST. LOUIS

Sirs:
While I am a St. Louisan, my brother-in-law, G. F. Babbitt, lives in Kansas City. George and I are both quite pleased with your treatment of our respective cities ("Kansas City and St. Louis," LIFE, March 29).
T. A. POND
St. Louis, Mo.

Sirs:
Under all its surface energy Kansas City is unsure of itself. St. Louis is mature enough to know exactly where it stands. Its principal source of quiet pride is long and distinguished contribution to the creation of the good and the beautiful for their own sake rather than for merely producing physical evidence that "we can do as well as anybody else. ..."
PVT. LOUIS E. CARLAT

Sirs:
Superb. I am one of many disgusted St. Louisans. Joe Pulitzer Jr. should print in his paper a new series of articles entitled, "Stay Here and Decay!"
DAVE FIEDLER

Sirs:
Cheers for Kansas City and Berl Berry's gusto. When this Western atmosphere of neighborliness, democracy, and even a little rowdiness disappears and the stultifying ways of the East and South set in, then what remains of the "last, best hope of mankind" will indeed have vanished.

FRED S. SILVERBERG
Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Sirs:
... A gentle protest against your suggestion that we have less culture than our sister city downstream. Our philharmonic, summer opera, spring opera, university, colleges and Midwest Research Institute are nothing to sneeze at. ... But in other respects we all agree with a columnist who wrote recently that about the only two things Kansas City and St. Louis have in common is a confluence.

GOVERNOR KNIGHT

Sirs:
... Your prediction of Knight's performance is premature ("California's 'Excellency' Excels at Jokes as Well as Politics," LIFE, March 29). You described Knight's performance in his last public job—lieutenant governor at $12,000 a year for seven years—with devastating accuracy. We paid Knight $84,000 to do a job for which, as you stated, "he showed a complete disdain" and about which he "refused to learn anything. ..."

H-BOMB CASUALTIES

Sirs:

Ordinarily I detest your politics. But I would like to congratulate you powerfully on Dwight Martin's "First Casualties of the H-Bomb" (LIFE, March 29). It was wholly human. 7-YEAR-OLD EILEEN CARLSON LOVES ANIMALS AND CLOTHES

Most youngsters would trade anything they own to be in Eileen Carlson's sneakers. Eileen helps her family train animals for TV appearances. This enables her to live on intimate terms with innumerable horses, doves, rabbits, guinea pigs, sheep, goats, myna birds, dogs, cats and a pair of cigar-smoking Sicilian burros!

Surprisingly, the family stables are located right in the heart of New York City. And Eileen has developed a city child's lively interest in clothes along with her love for animals.

Since her mother wears Sacony clothes, Eileen firmly insists that a Sacony wardrobe be bought for her, too. Eileen's Sacony shorts are made of sturdy cotton gabardine. The cotton lisle shirts match in color. They also match in detail. For example, note how the scalloped knit trim appears on shorts as well as shirt, how a striped waistband inspires a striped neckline. And despite the low prices, everything is well tailored and dependably washable.

The rebus, or picture riddle, is a contagious way of writing with pictures. The one above emerged when some members of the staff, inspired by our Speaking of Pictures this week (pp. 6, 7), got fascinated by its wider possibilities. In good old rebus tradition, we have chosen pictures above to represent the sound of syllables and words rather than their meanings—the Stuart portrait of Washington doesn't bear any resemblance to the nation's capital, and we consider Mr. Dulles far from dull.

As for the message itself, it poses the problem facing every good Washington reporter—to push through the deadly facade of the same people sounding much the same way and come up with something fresh and penetrating. For the photographer, who faces the eternal reluctance of public officials to relax publicly, the job of penetrating the facade is even tougher. LIFE's Washington bureau has consistently broken through—this week with particular success. In George Skadding's story on pages 28, 29 those television viewers who wondered how President Eisenhower suddenly became so relaxed on his recent nationwide broadcast will find their answer. And in the photographic essay by Photographer Hank Walker and Reporter Jim McConaughy (pp. 110-116), readers will get a highly original look at members of the most exclusive club in the world, the U.S. Senate. This is a look not from the outside but from within, showing how the senators themselves feel about each other.

Another form of writing with pictures—mystical, visionary and highly personal—is William Blake's 1795 interpretation in watercolors and words of the Crucifixion and Resurrection (pp. 60-68), a poetic Easter story. And carrying the art of picture-talking to an inescapable result, the charade, we note that a doggerel-minded doctor in Fife, Scotland (p. 140) has not only invented a dramatic method of sex education for his pupils but dressed them up, rebuslike, to make the lesson stick.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS ADD VIVID REALITY TO NATION'S CONCEPT OF H-BOMB

The nation's awareness of the hydrogen age, to which it was introduced three weeks ago, grew in intensity last week as civil defense workers and other groups saw a different version of the televised film of "Operation Ivy." This was in color. Instead of a black and white shadow of the explosion, viewers saw in glaring redness the bulging fireball of the hydrogen device which vaporized Elugelab Island at Eniwetok on Nov. 1, 1952. Photographed through filters so dark they excluded all trace of the bright Pacific sunlight, the fireball lit up the clouds above and the sea around as it seared away sands and coral beneath it.

The Ivy color film has an "unclassified" security status, which means that it contains no information of use to a possible enemy. LIFE presents scenes from it in the spirit of President Eisenhower's address last week on the subject of the fears raised by threatening aspects of the world today, including the hydrogen bomb: "The greater any of these apprehensions, the greater is the need that we look at them clearly, face to face, without fear, like honest, straightforward Americans...."

SIR WINSTON'S FACE IS A GLASS HELD UP TO WORLD'S WORRIES

The explosion which shook the world's certainty in its own survival also shook Sir Winston Churchill and undoubtedly brought closer the day when the prime minister will retire. The concern the world feels about the H-bomb was mirrored in his aging face (below) as he rode to the House of Commons. He showed his age even more in a debate that recalled the bitterness of 1940 when a Tory M.P. pleaded with Neville Chamberlain, "In the name of God, go." When Churchill blamed Laborites for allowing the Anglo-U.S. atomic agreement to lapse, there were shouts of "Resign!" Anthony Eden, who thinks the bomb may be a deterrent to war "because those who have it . . . must understand how terrible can be the consequences," salvaged what he could from the wrangle and pledged a new realistic attempt at disarmament. In the U.N. the West again tried to pin Russia down to talks on the subject.

IT WILL NOT SAVE CIVILIZATION EXCEPT BY SAVING THE SOUL OF THE INDIVIDUAL

A gigantic assertion will be made at Evanston, Ill. this summer when Protestants of 48 nations meet in the second World Council of Churches. It is that Jesus Christ is the only hope of the world today. In choosing this great theme, the World Council seems to have assumed, first, that the world is sick of its own "hopelessness and false hopes"; and second, that the Christian hope has been clearly defined for the world. Neither of these assumptions will bear much examination; but the theme itself is worth any amount.

Is our world more than usually hopeless of its own future? There is little evidence of it. The general fear of annihilation by H-bomb is not desperate; it takes the form of barking for action, as you would expect of any healthy animals whose instinct of self-preservation is unimpaired. The atom has not recruited many members for the end-of-the-world religious sects. Even the menace of Communism, for all its earmarks of anti-Christ, has not terrorized its Western prey like frozen rabbits; it has instead either adrenalized them into resistance or soothed them into the hope—deluded but not desperate—of adapting somehow to Communism as a huge new fact. The one statistical measure of despair, the suicide rate, shows no meaningful trends.

Perhaps despair is a human constant. What then of false hopes? Man always harbors plenty but he has lately managed to shed a few. The doctrine of automatic progress, which so warped the 19th Century's picture of itself, has all but vanished. System builders, utopians, even reformers are in rather short supply. Majorities everywhere seem unusually conservative and skeptical, less easily stampeded today than yesterday or tomorrow. Yet the world seems not to miss its false hopes, and could perhaps do well enough without any, as did the ancient Stoics with their "bear and forbear."

So the World Council of Churches will find no extra-eager audience for its great theme of Christian hope. Moreover some hearers have perhaps already been discouraged by a conflict of definitions. Churchmen are talking of "the theological fog bank headed toward Evanston." At a time when Protestantism is rich in good theologians, why this confusion?

The reason is that Christian hope is concerned with the greatest of all mysteries—eschatology, or the science of last things: the Second Coming, the Day of Judgment, the end of the world. The Christian hope is nothing less than the hope of heaven, and this hope is central to Christian faith. But in showing man the path to heaven, the Gospels themselves are ambiguous.

The early Christians lived under the exciting certainty of an imminent Day of Judgment. As Gibbon put it, "the secret cause of their security (was) the expectation that, before the conversion of mankind was accomplished, war, government, the Roman Empire, and the world itself, would be no more." Centuries of unjudged history have, of course, attenuated this vivid conception. Theologians came to accept man's "revised situation" and said the early Christians were plain wrong. The concrete Christian hope of a climax in history gave way to vaguer hopes for the improvement of mankind's lot on earth, and even to that travesty of hope, a diffuse optimism about the nature of man.

But in recent years the "neo-orthodox" theologians have revived the Day of Judgment. Without dating it, they remind us that all Christians are under judgment every hour. Without explicitly brandishing the H-bomb, they insist on the futility and built-in sinfulness of all human achievements. Karl Barth, the rigorous Swiss theologian, declares not only that "men never were good, are not good, and never will be good," but also that "the whole conception of a Christian civilization in the West has been piteously exposed as an illusion." His "religion fashioned for the catacombs," as Niebuhr calls it, seems to send us back to the First Century for salvation.

Well, it is an invigorating place to go. It was in fact the century in which our civilization was born. Rome was our parent, and lives in us still. The Christians (despite the subversive role assigned them by Gibbon) did not kill Rome; they built a greater Rome. But here is the paradox of their stupendous historical achievement: while creating Western civilization, their minds were on something else.

* St. Paul preached a "law-free gospel," that Christians could claim unprecedented liberty of thought and action. This was the unintended but indispensable seed of the political liberty we know today. But Paul would not let this liberty be abused; he coupled his defiance of the Roman emperor with admonitions for responsible living in Rome; he told his Christians they must rule themselves because they would one day rule the world. And so they do now, a large part of it; they now have full political responsibility, which is the other part of their "revised situation."

Can Christians discharge this responsibility and still be faithful to the Gospels? The task is not so different from what Paul taught them. Our world can best be defended if it is continually renewed and corrected and occasionally defied. "For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh," said Paul. He boasted that he had engraved his message not on stone but on living men and women. He armed them with "the shield of faith and love, and on our heads the helmet of hope."

Then as now it was the greatest of all hopes: that every man who believes and works for God can share the perfection and immortality of his Son. This promise has not changed the circumstances of human existence, nor the flawed nature of man. What has been changed is the life of each Christian. The Christian uses more fully the talents God gave him, "knowing that your labor is not in vain in the Lord," whether or not it pans out on this earth. The Christian's life reminds others, whether Christian or not, that "the manifestation of the spirit is given to every man," and that this call must be answered as well as we know how.

To those whose theology makes them impatient either for Judgment Day or for some evidence of human improvement, there seems to be an implied rebuff in what F. D. Nichol calls "the endlessly increasing total of good men's tombstones." These stones may or may not point toward God's final victory over sin and death; what matters is that in each case goodness was a personal achievement and heaven doubtless a personal reward. Like corals building the Great Barrier Reef, all these Christians created our Western civilization as the unplanned by-product of their personal hope and labor. Simple piety tells us not to despise such a by-product; but if we really wish to defend and extend it, to make it a "continuing city," we can do so only by imitating the builders, whose real hope was elsewhere.

The Christian champions of a Christian civilization are not answerable for or to that civilization, but to God alone. And the glory of the Christian hope is that it is not offered to "the world," but to living men and women for a life beyond.

PICTURE OF THE WEEK

THE SHOWER IS OUT THAT-A-WAY

As baseball got ready to open its season, something really new showed up in the spring exhibitions—a bizarre form of umpire baiting. In Long Beach, Calif., objecting to a decision, Bobby Bragan, manager of the Hollywood Stars, lay down on the field and said, "I got no place to go." Towering over him, a pillar of outraged authority, Umpire Al Mutart told him where he could go. He pointed. Bragan pointed. Then Bragan took himself off to the showers.

ARMS FOLDED, Montgomery gives a display of aplomb before the telecast.

HALF SITTING ON DESK BEFORE TELECAST, MONTGOMERY TAKES EISENHOWER'S PLACE, CHECKS CAMERA POSITION

Robert Montgomery Presents:

PRESIDENT AS A PRO

When President Eisenhower faced the nation on television last week he revealed a new TV personality. Instead of entrenching himself behind his desk and reading uneasily, the President lounged against the desk, folded and unfolded his arms casually, smiled easily and often. He used a few simple, telling gestures and from time to time moved about. Speaking without a set speech but cued by notes printed on big cards, the President urged the country not to give in to unreasoning fears over the H-bomb. It was his most professional TV performance to date. Behind it lay four months of hard rehearsals and expert advice from Actor-TV Producer Robert Montgomery, who has been added to the White House staff "to handle visual communications for the President." Most heartening to the President's advisers was the fact that although the coaching was pure Montgomery, the words, gestures and personality were always pure Ike.

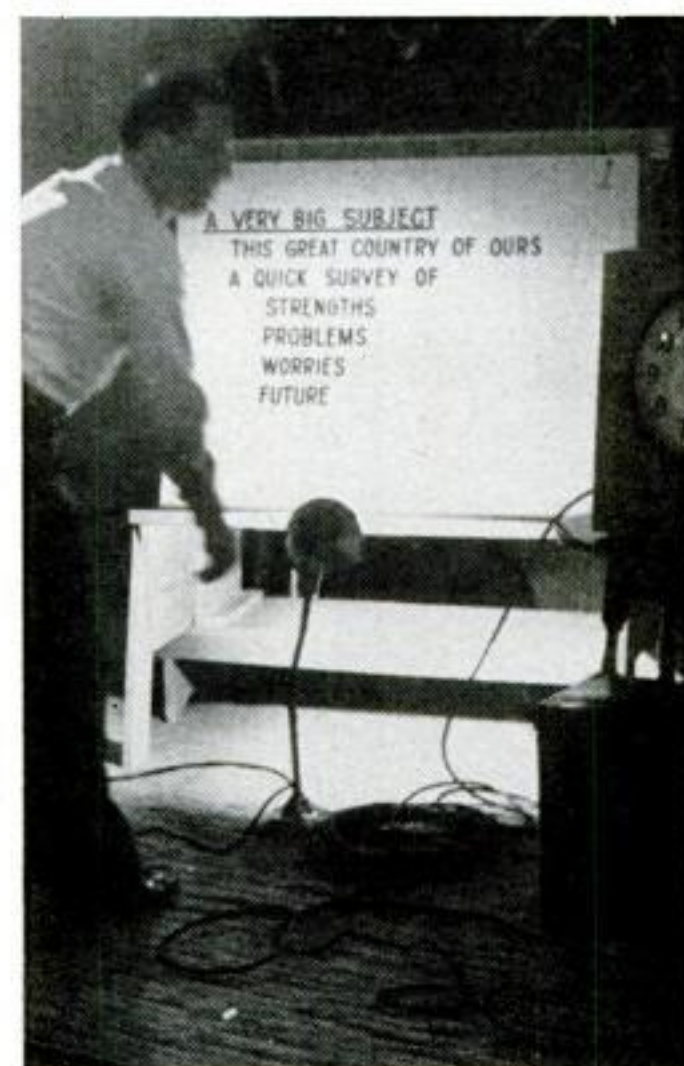

AWAITING SIGNAL to go on, Montgomery stays close to ease President, who began by addressing wrong camera. Reserve camera was quickly switched on.

AFTER SPEECH Montgomery, who is an unpaid "technical consultant," rushes up to tell the President all went well. Vice President Nixon waits (right).

CONGRATULATING PRESIDENT on his delivery, Nixon and Press Secretary Hagerty join Montgomery, who said, "I love it when he gets going like that."

ANGRY DEMONSTRATOR in crowd gathered at Arc de Triomphe to honor Dienbienphu dead gets more violent by stages. He spots Defense Minister Plevén approaching. "Vive Juin," he shouts, makes a fist and finally waves it in face of Plevén (wearing glasses). Police had to help Plevén get away.

THE SAD SPECTACLE OF A BICKERING FRANCE

Fists are brandished and insults flung on the eve of plea for 'united action'

Last week as French forces in Indochina clung courageously to the besieged fortress of Dienbienphu, France was undergoing another ordeal at home: a bloodless but dismaying battle of words. It was started by Marshal Alphonse Juin (right), who is France's first soldier and NATO's Central European commander, calling EDC a "misdeal." When ordered personally by Premier Joseph Laniel to account for his action, Juin snubbed the summons and was sacked for insubordination.

Every French political faction jumped into the act. Juin's dismissal was an excuse to insult the government, attack EDC or blame the U.S. for France's ills. The Communists, who had bitterly opposed Juin, now claimed him as a fellow opponent of EDC. Right-wing leader Charles de Gaulle called Juin the victim of a "moral swindle." Asked whether he would have tolerated Juin's insubordination if he were premier, De Gaulle screamed, "I was France—the government and the state." But the sorriest spectacle of all came when Laniel (below) and Defense Minister René Plevén (above) were jeered and jostled by a pro-Juin mob at the Arc de Triomphe. Still shaken by that, the government's leaders awaited the arrival of U.S. Secretary of State Dulles with an offer of help that, in view of the unpopularity of the Indochinese war among French voters, was positively embarrassing. He was asking France to back his "united action" plan against further Red aggression in Southeast Asia.

ANGRY DE GAULLE, looking surprisingly old, backs Juin, warning ratification of EDC under pressure from U.S. would cause a "state of revolt in France."

BESIEGED PREMIER, Joseph Laniel, squeezes through the hostile crowd at the Arc de Triomphe trying to reach his car. He finally left in a police car instead.

CENTER OF THE ROW, Marshal Alphonse-Pierre Juin, takes a quiet, early morning walk at Annebault where he went from Paris last week to attend his brother-in-law's funeral. Though the French cabinet in rebuking Juin stripped him of all his military duties, he retains the seven-star rank of marshal for life.

CHIEF TV CRITIC, Edward R. Murrow of CBS, ponders next move after McCarthy called him "the leader of jackal pack" of Communist sympathizers.

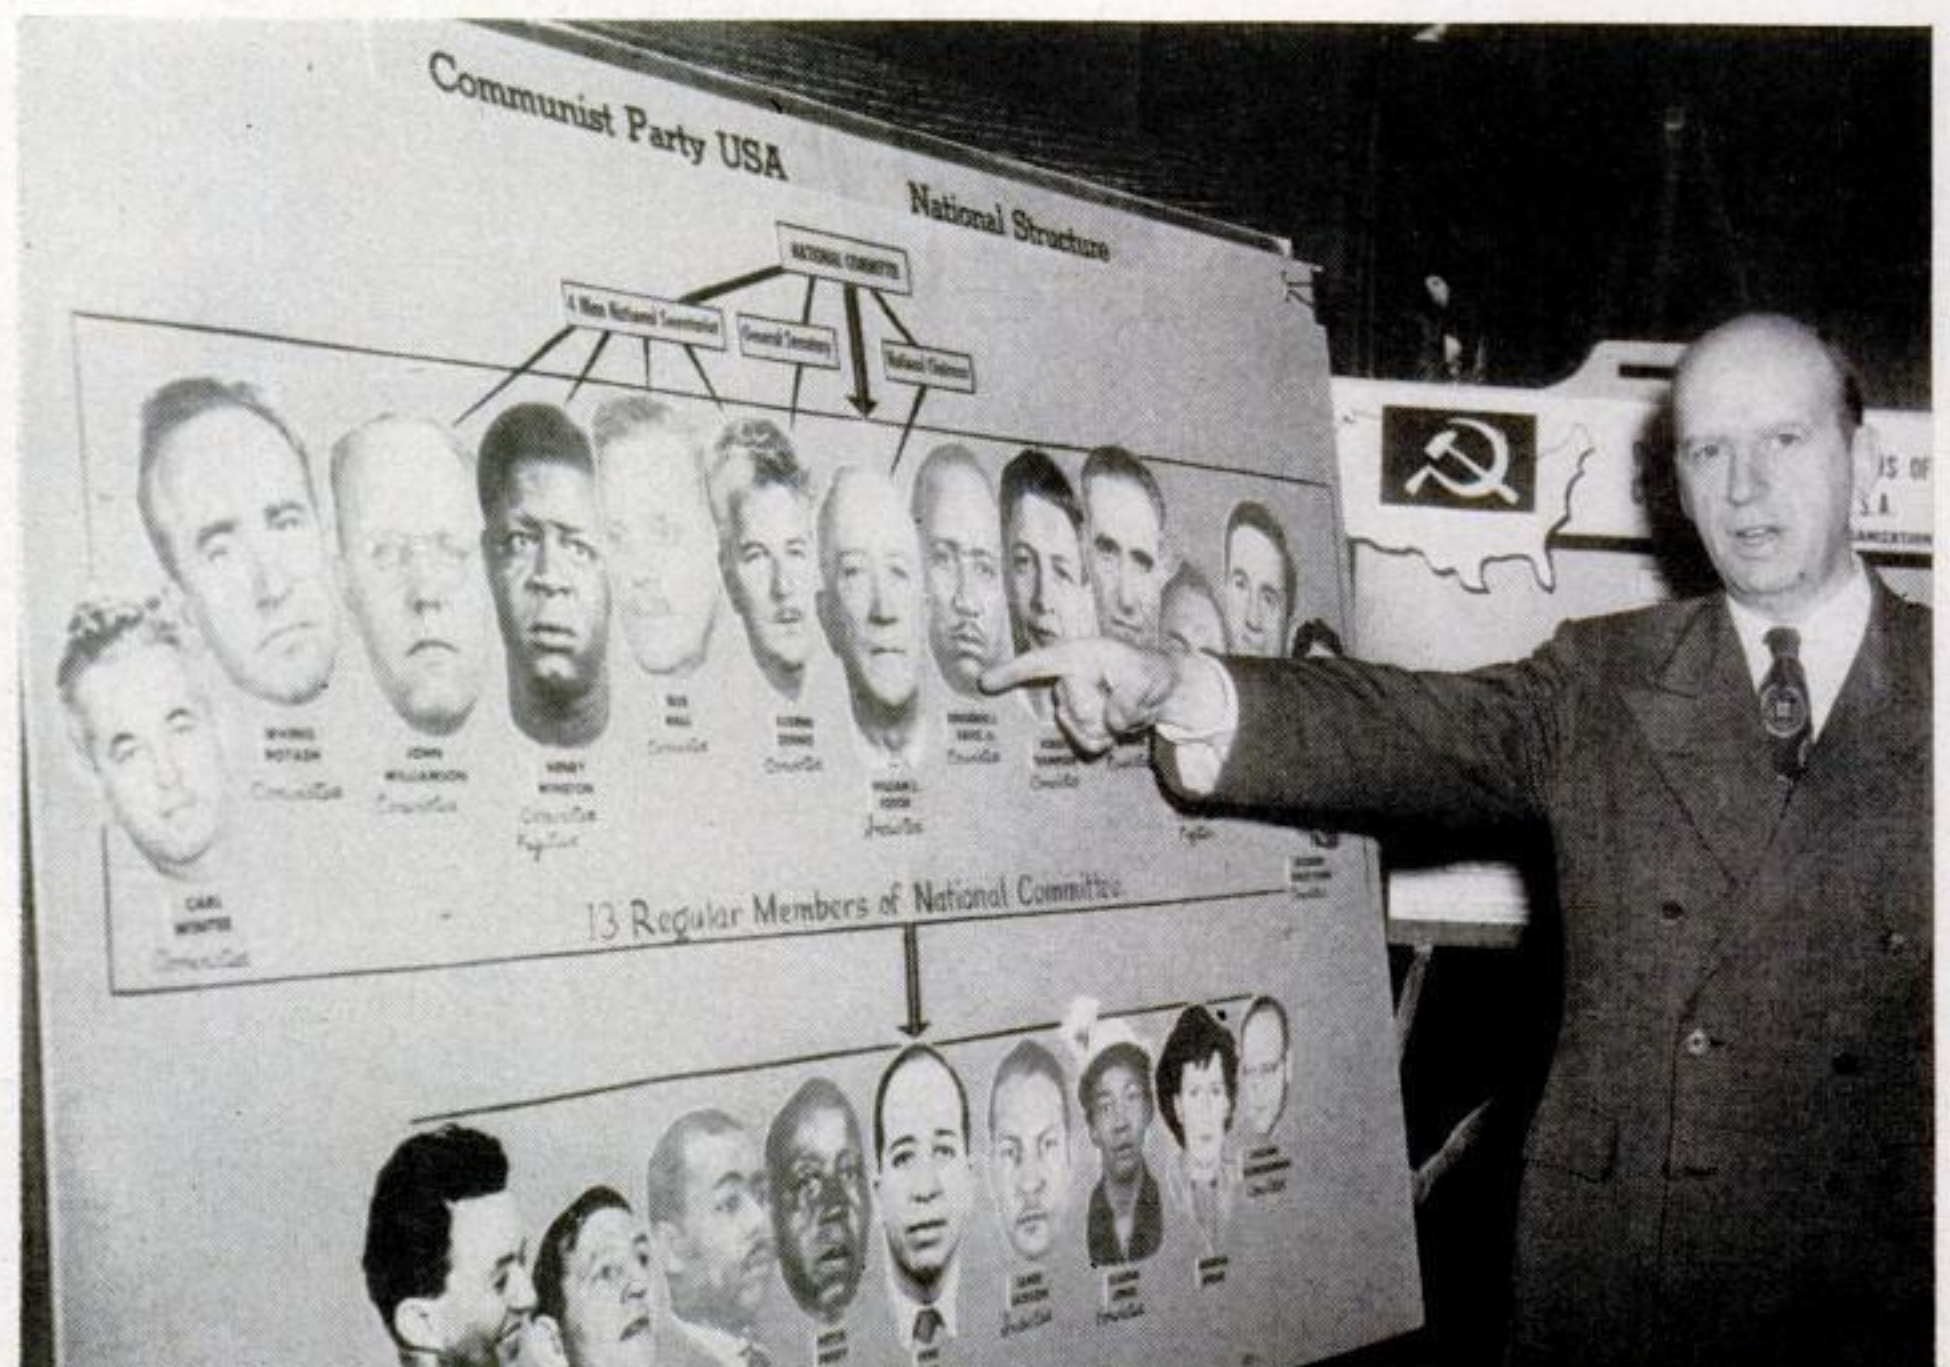

NEW COUNSEL to McCarthy's committee, Ray Jenkins of Knoxville, Tenn., looks on as Senator Mundt, the subcommittee's temporary chairman, announces appointment. A few days before, committee accepted the resignation of its first choice, Samuel Sears (LIFE, April 12). Jenkins, who is a lifelong

NEW CHURCH CRITIC, Bishop Sheil, talks with Walter Reuther. "We have been treated like country rubes taken in by a city slicker," he said in talk.

TAKING THE PLAY AWAY from McCarthy, at least temporarily, Attorney General Brownell in a TV and radio talk outlined U.S. accomplishments in prosecuting Communists. He pointed to convicted or indicted leaders, described bills to outlaw Communist unions, take citizenship from Communists.

Republican, has handled more than 500 homicide cases in 34 years. "I have no record on mccarthyism," said Jenkins. Hearings are to start April 22.

RECALL LEADER, Editor Leroy Gore of Sauk-Prairie Star, has collected 185,000 of 403,000 signatures needed to start proceedings against McCarthy.

McCARTHY MARCHES WITH POLICE DOWN FIFTH AVENUE ON WAY TO HOLY NAME SOCIETY BREAKFAST

FROM CHEERS TO 'PHOOEY'

McCarthy finds some quiet in Arizona but stirs up noise elsewhere

Joe McCarthy was basking on Westbrook Pegler's ranch last week while a hot Arizona sun poured down on him and hotter arguments raged throughout the country. McCarthy had stirred up some of it by remote control in a truculent television talk which he had filmed beforehand. Replying on Edward R. Murrow's program to attacks by Murrow, McCarthy accused Murrow of doing Communists' work and, specifically, of being a member of the I.W.W. Murrow denied the general charges, said flatly the I.W.W. statement was a lie.

In Washington, after some confusion, McCarthy's subcommittee picked a new counsel for the McCarthy-Army hearings. At the moment there seemed to be many more people against McCarthy than for him. In Wisconsin a recall movement gained support. A Nevada publisher was charged with printing statements tending to incite violence against McCarthy. New York policemen who belong to a Catholic society cheered Joe when their retiring chaplain described him as a man who "fought untruth with truth, treason with patriotism."

But from a Chicago Catholic came a different sound. In the first direct attack on McCarthy by a dignitary of his own church, Auxiliary Bishop Bernard J. Sheil called mccarthyism a "perversion of morality." Speaking before the United Auto Workers, the bishop said that "although the Church takes no position on such a public controversy, it does take a position on lies, calumny and calculated deceit. . . . This kind of ridiculous goings on is seriously described as anti-Communism. If you will pardon a very low-brow comment, I say 'Phooey!'"

VACATIONING SENATOR strolls with his wife Jean about the Pegler ranch near Tucson, Ariz. Mrs. McCarthy is still convalescing from a broken ankle which she suffered in a recent automobile accident. Before going out to Arizona, the senator was laid up in New York with laryngitis and a virus infection.

Barcelona mobs Blue Division

After absences of a decade and more, 286 Spaniards came home from Soviet prison camps and were greeted amid scenes of delirious emotion. Most of them were hard-bitten veterans of Franco's Blue Division, captured when fighting for Hitler on the Russian Front. There were also a few sailors, some supporters of the old Spanish republic, even four wizened little old-young men who were children when they were sent to Russia during the Spanish civil war. All, friends and foes of Communism alike, had been in slave labor camps for periods ranging from 10 to 16 years. There were probably 200 Spaniards still left in the camps.

From the Liberian ship Semiramis, carrying them from Odessa to Barcelona, the returning prisoners made radio-telephone calls to relatives, and these heartbreaking conversations were broadcast to the country. Spain's tears welled up. When the ship docked, a hysterical mob stormed aboard.

It was a truly Spanish scene, wild and emotional. Men fell into each other's arms and sobbed. Women fainted. A cameraman dropped dead of excitement. But it was just as truly Spanish in the irony that came out amid the emotion. "Communism?" mused a repatriated Socialist of the old Popular Front days. "Cabbage, hard work and everyone for himself." And a veteran of the Blue Division, peering into the sobbing face of Minister of War Agustín Muñoz Grandes who commanded the division in Russia, murmured wryly, "My general, you don't know how much we missed you."

ANOTHER CLIMBER, in a hurry to board the ship, swung out on a mooring line. He carried a welcoming banner and worked his way hand over hand from shore while the crowd in small boats applauded.

SIX BITS BUYS A BIT OF TEXAS

Ranch is on sale in tiny pieces

If BenJack Cage's big land deal comes through, he will sell an acre of ordinary Texas grazing land for more than $2 million dollars, and a horde of Americans will find themselves the owners of a genuine Texas ranch, attested to by a warranty deed (above).

The land up for sale is part of Cage's Lazy C Ranch, a 4,000-acre tract 23 miles south of Houston. Cage, an industrialist who raises registered Brahman cattle, decided recently to sell off some of his land. Subdividing it into small plots, he prepared deeds which will be sold over the counter for 75¢ each—mineral rights not included—in drugstores, hotels, transportation terminals and novelty shops. The ranches are only two square inches in size, which would make 3,136,320 ranches to the acre, but Cage thinks there are that many people who would like to own even this much of Texas.

LOOKING FOR THEIR RANCHES, purchasers with deeds in hand go over tract subdivided with crossed strings. To find their plots they match numbers on deed and a master plan, then count squares.

TOP OCTANE Sky Chief SUPER-CHARGED with PETROX

A REVOLUTIONARY NEW GASOLINE ADVANCEMENT
BY TEXACO not only delivers MAXIMUM POWER... but actually CUTS ENGINE WEAR!

GREATER speeds and increased stop-and-start driving brought about the need for a new kind of gasoline.

Texaco engineers worked on this problem for many months. They succeeded far beyond our early hopes. Through intensive research they developed a new petroleum-base element — PETROX — and with it have produced a new kind of gasoline.

Here are the astonishing facts, confirmed by more than a million miles of tests. The new top octane Sky Chief, Super-Charged with PETROX, gives you:

- 1. MAXIMUM POWER yet actually cuts engine wear. How? By protecting valves, valve guides and valve seats, pistons and piston rings against wear, glazing and harmful deposits. For example, on test cars using new Sky Chief, ring wear alone was reduced up to 45%! Spark plug life and efficiency were prolonged over 300%. This kind of protection means maximum driving power is delivered to your wheels where it belongs — instead of out the exhaust pipe.
- 2. A CLEANER, SMOOTHER ENGINE. Intake system deposits were cut down by as much as 38%. This kind of engine cleanliness, with Sky Chief's top octane, means knock-free performance. From your first tankful you'll notice a new smoothness, a new responsiveness when you step on the gas; quicker starts, quicker warm-ups, faster get-aways, knock-free power to spare for highway and hill.

3. VISIBLE ECONOMY. . . Engines die because they burn themselves out. This new top octane Sky Chief Gasoline, Super-Charged with PETROX, keeps your engine younger. That's why you get maximum power and that's how you cut down wear — and repair bills. That's why you get the extra mileage, real extra mileage that you can check on your speedometer.

All your driving becomes real pleasure driving when you know you have the extra power and extra protection of the new top octane Sky Chief, Super-Charged with PETROX. At your Texaco Dealer now.

When Texaco Sky Chief Gasoline was first introduced in 1938, it was immediately accepted as an outstanding petroleum product and described as the gasoline for those who want the best. Through the years it has maintained this reputation.

Keeping ahead of new developments in America's automobile engine design, Sky Chief Gasoline has been constantly improved. The pledge of The Texas Company has always been to make it the best . . . and keep it the best.

New top octane Sky Chief, Super-Charged with PETROX, is now, more than ever, the gasoline for those who want the best.

Flames in Buffalo schoolhouse trap pupils at a music lesson

In the sixth-grade music class at Cleveland Hill School in the Buffalo, N.Y. suburb of Cheektowaga, one teacher had just sat down at the piano and another was handing out batons for a rhythm drill. All but one of 30 pupils, who last fall posed happily for the class picture above, were present. They were taking the lesson in the school's one-story wooden annex, a building in which several times before pupils had noticed a peculiar odor. But no one had ever found out what caused the smell, which may have been coal gas.

Suddenly the annex filled with smoke and flames. Some pupils and a visiting cap and gown salesman rushed to windows and began to smash the panes. Two teachers helped push many children out to safety and then, with clothes afire, tumbled out themselves. But other panic-stricken children piled on top of one another near the windows as flames within seconds filled the classroom from floor to ceiling.

A new crash grounds British Comets again, giveaway shows get O.K. and an octopus errs

A British Comet jet airliner crashed in the Mediterranean sea, killing all 21 people aboard. All Comets, which had been reinstated to service only on March 23 after being grounded because of a crash in January ("Did the Jet Age Come Too Soon?" LIFE, Jan. 25), were now grounded again. At least one expert blamed the latest crash on a mysterious "death ceiling," which seems to give the Comets trouble when they reach an altitude of about six miles. Some Britons thought the Comets would never be put in use again.

More Middle East killings

Eight new shooting incidents along the borders of Israel were reported, this time between Egyptian and Israeli soldiers. Both sides charged the other with aggression, but in the only two cases where the Israeli-Egyptian Mixed Armistice Commission affixed blame, infiltrating "military or para-military armed Israelis" were censured for two attacks in which three Egyptian soldiers were killed. Meanwhile, at U.N. headquarters in New York, the U.S., Britain and France lined up with Israel in favor of discussing the entire Arab-Israeli problem and against the Arab demand that the Security Council first consider the Israeli raid at the Jordanian village of Nahalin. Said the French delegate, arguing for the broader agenda, "A doctor does not attack the symptoms, he attacks the disease." Lebanon instructed Dr. Charles Malik to walk out of the Security Council if the Nahalin massacre question was not discussed first.

On four occasions since the photo finish camera became the supreme arbiter of horse race finishes in 1936, the pictures have confirmed three-horse dead heats. Last week in the first race at the Laurel, Md. track the camera almost produced its first portrait of a four-way tie. Happy Bull, Noble Idea and Weird Music managed to push their noses across the final line at the precise same moment to tie for third place. A fourth horse, Milldale, was inches behind (above) and so the nearly historic photograph became instead merely a dramatic picture of the fifth triple dead heat in 18 years.

Time for recession remedies?

David McDonald, president of the C.I.O. steelworkers union, called on President Eisenhower to complain about the effects of the current business slump on the members of his union and to plead for governmental countermeasures. Afterward word seeped out from the White House that he had partly convinced the President and that some sort of antirecession action—probably liberalized credit policies and a public works program—would soon be announced, even though recent statistics have indicated the decline was starting to slacken.

The Supreme Court ruled that TV and radio giveaway shows are not lotteries and do not violate federal law. A bulldozer whips an eight-armed foe

An eight-foot, eight-armed octopus, which had anchored itself offshore near Jenner, Calif., captured a man who was groping in the chest-deep water for abalone mollusks. But the unlucky octopus had picked on the wrong victim. He was "Big Jim" Antone (right), a 265-pound, full-blooded Indian bulldozer operator, wise in the ways of octopi. Instead of trying to escape the creature's multiple hold, Big Jim waded ashore with it and started pounding its big, balloonlike head against a rock. After 10 minutes of this treatment, the octopus went limp, released its steely grip and died. Big Jim, who later recalled, "I never saw so many arms in my life," tossed it onto the sand and waded back to finish his abalone hunting.

The faculty of Duke University revealed that they had voted against giving an honorary degree to one of their most famous alumni—Vice President Nixon, School of Law, 1937. He in turn informed them that unexpected pressure of business will not permit him to deliver the commencement address in June as he had previously planned.

Professor Lysenko's waning star

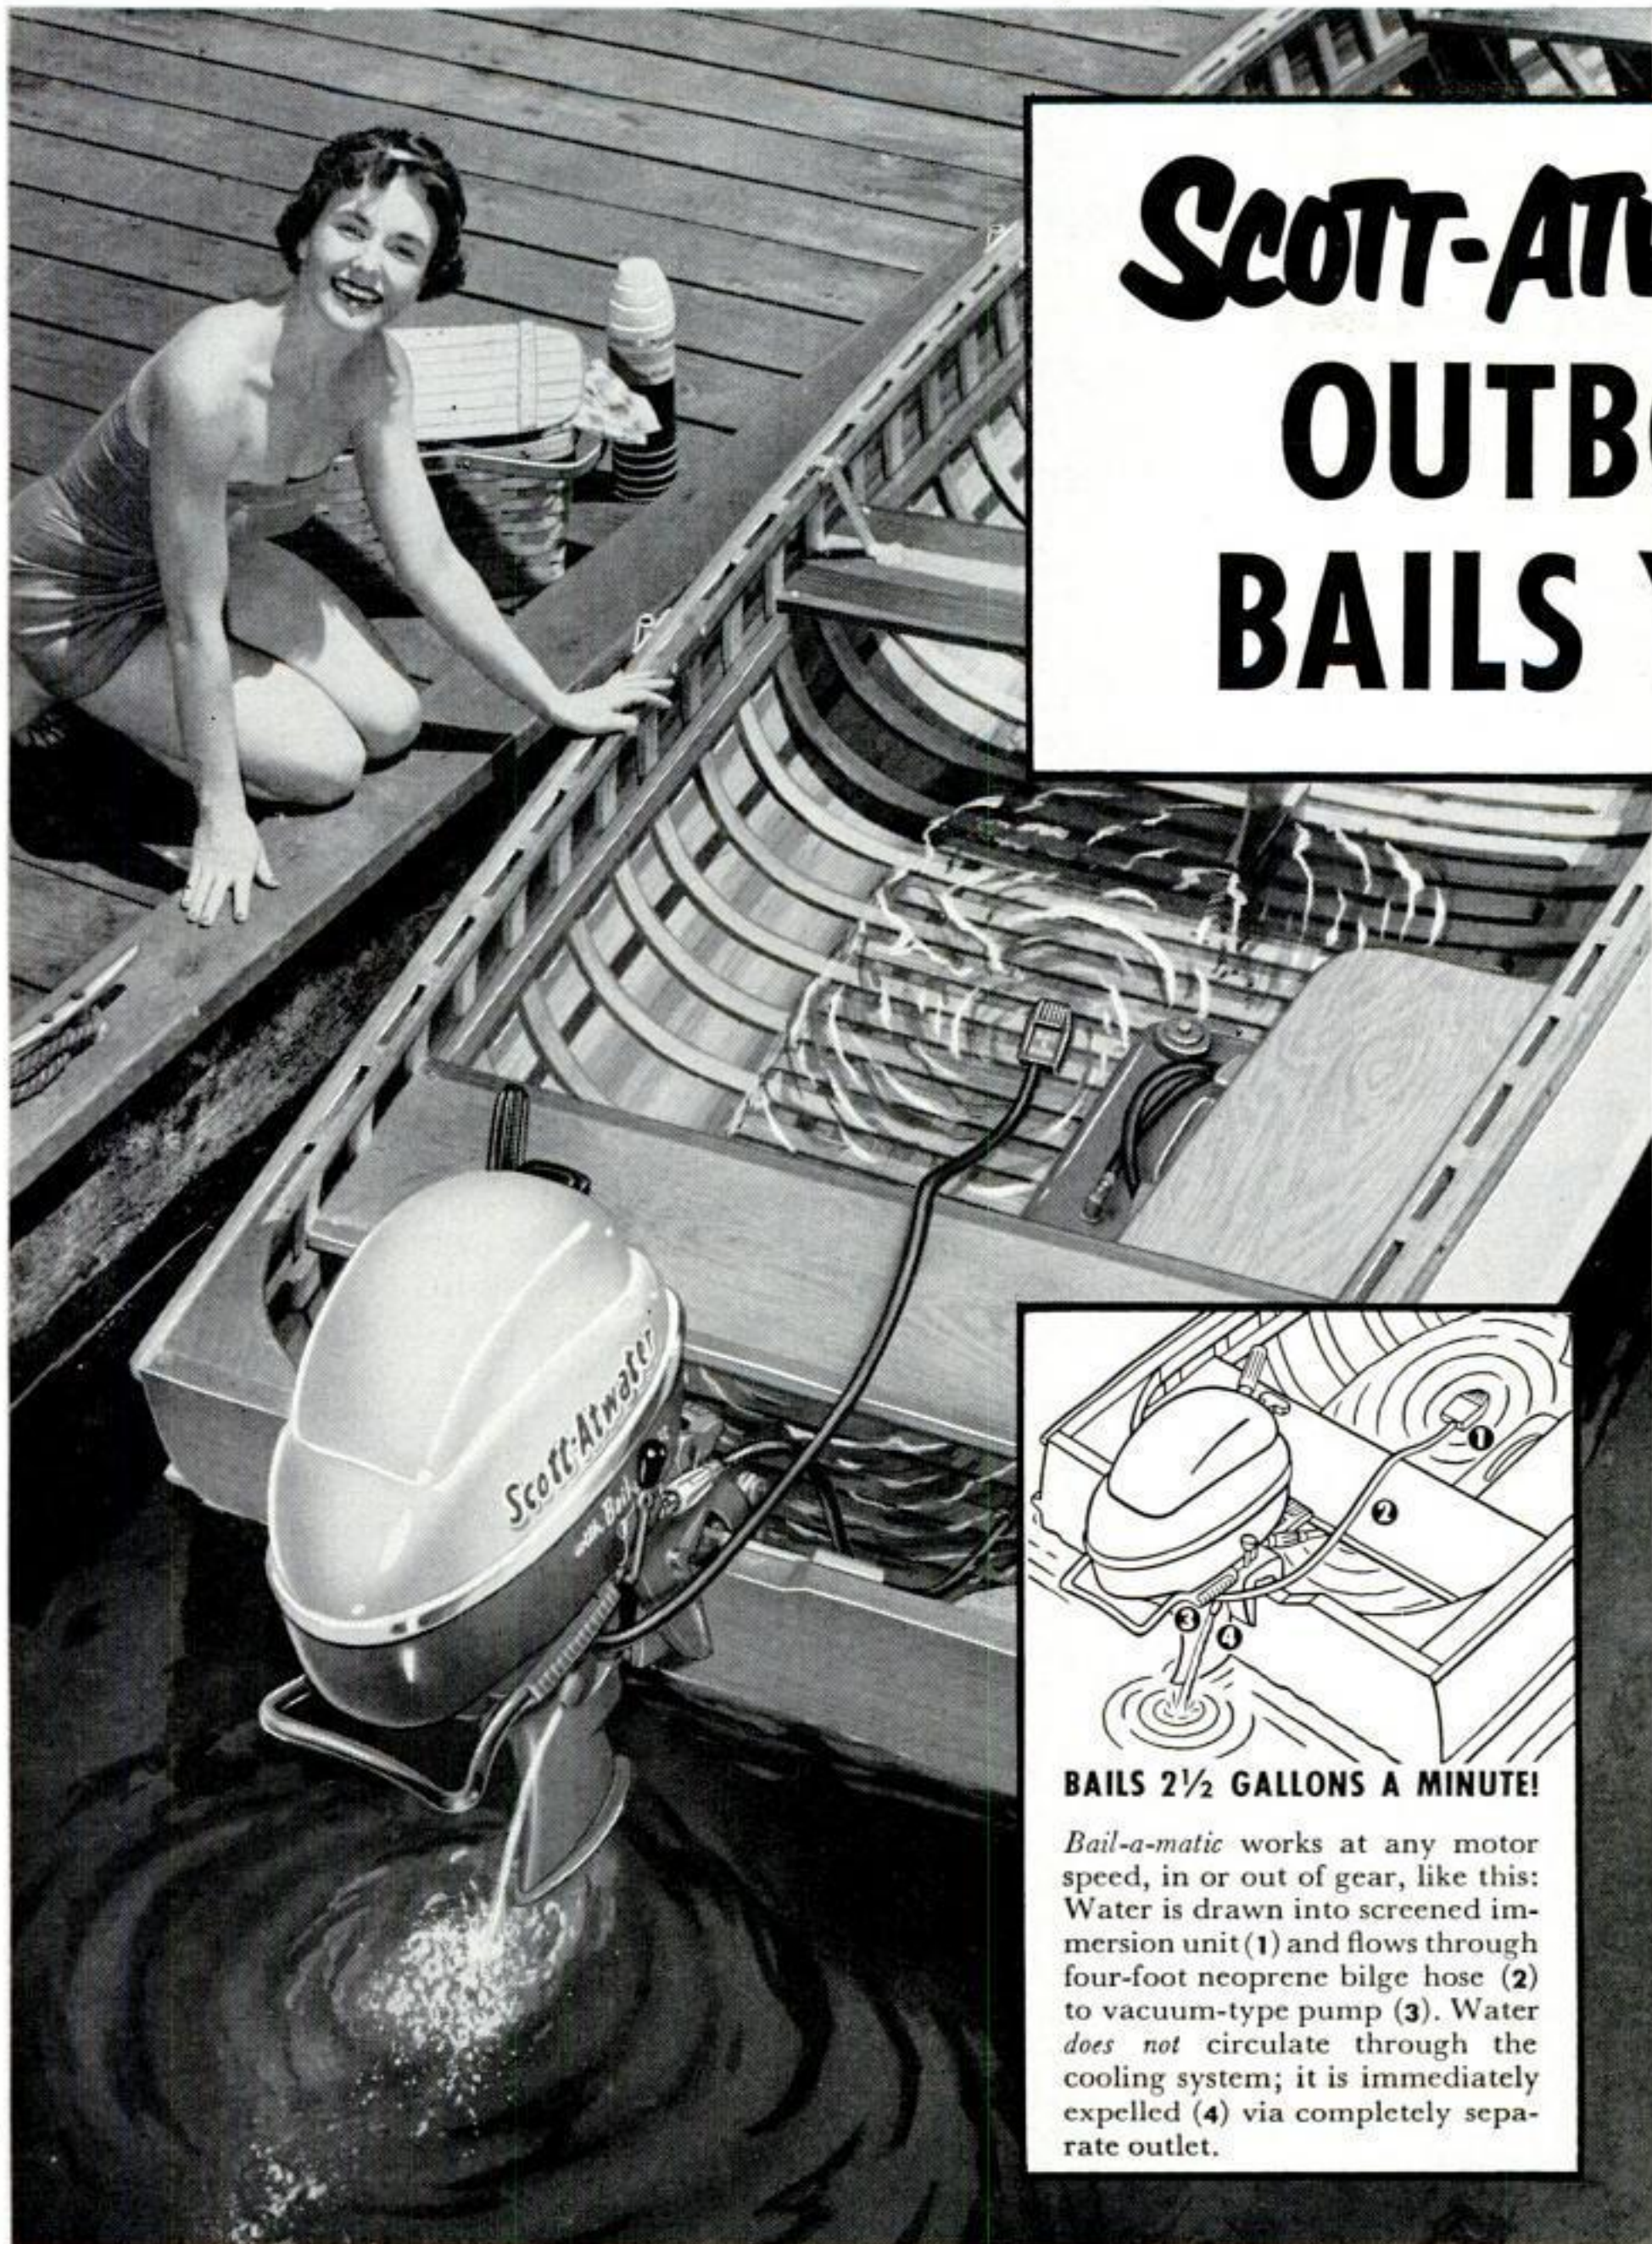

The day of glory for Professor Trofim D. Lysenko, darling of Soviet science, seemed to be passing. Western scientists had been shocked by his dictum that traits acquired by environment could be inherited—a theory which contradicted previous experimental knowledge and was soon laughed off by most biologists. But Lysenko's findings were adopted as official Communist dogma. Last month Lysenko was reprimanded for trying to push an incompetent protégé into a doctor's degree. Last week the magazine Kommunist, highest ideological party publication, attacked Lysenko's theories themselves. The theories, said Kommunist, must be re-examined in a "free struggle of opinion." Then the magazine went on to defend a recent Lysenko critic whose reputation had been quickly torn to shreds by the party faithful.

In Houston four state narcotics agents who had been living "underground" for 11 weeks joined forces with 33 city cops in the biggest dope raid in Texas history. The raid netted 49 suspected addicts and dope pushers and "broke the back" of drug traffic in the city. The agents had grown pachuco, or duck-tail haircuts, worn "character" clothes, given up washing and equipped themselves with imitation dope-injection kits. "We lived just one step better than the addicts: we don't have the habit," explained one tired-out agent.

BIG BERTHA MIMICS POSE OF RACING MARE MOTHER

Miniature horse fools the experts

When a thoroughbred filly colt named Big Bertha was born on Woodland Farm near Red Bank, N.J. last month, nobody thought she had a chance to live. One of twins, which have bad survival statistics among horses, Big Bertha weighed only 13 pounds (normal weight: 60 pounds) and was about a foot and a half tall. Her larger twin soon died. But Big Bertha, fed on a bottle, was full of energy and refused to die. Last week the colt was 24 pounds heavy and finally tall enough to reach her mother for nursing. It was obvious that Big Bertha was out of danger and would grow into a midget curiosity of the horse world.

Víctor Raúl de la Torre, Peruvian political fugitive who had avoided arrest by staying inside the Colombian embassy at Lima for five years, was finally allowed to leave the country. He immediately flew to Mexico.

More trouble for Jimmy

James Roosevelt, who is simultaneously being sued for divorce (LIFE, Feb. 15) and running for the Democratic nomination for a California seat in Congress, was refused the official support of the Democratic party by National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell. "A congressional election is not the proper forum to render a verdict on private litigation relating to a man's domestic affairs," Mitchell said, adding that Roosevelt should pull out of the race. Mitchell also denied party support to Democratic Congressman Robert L. Condon of California, who has been labeled a security risk by the Atomic Energy Commission. Roosevelt and Condon said they would run anyway.

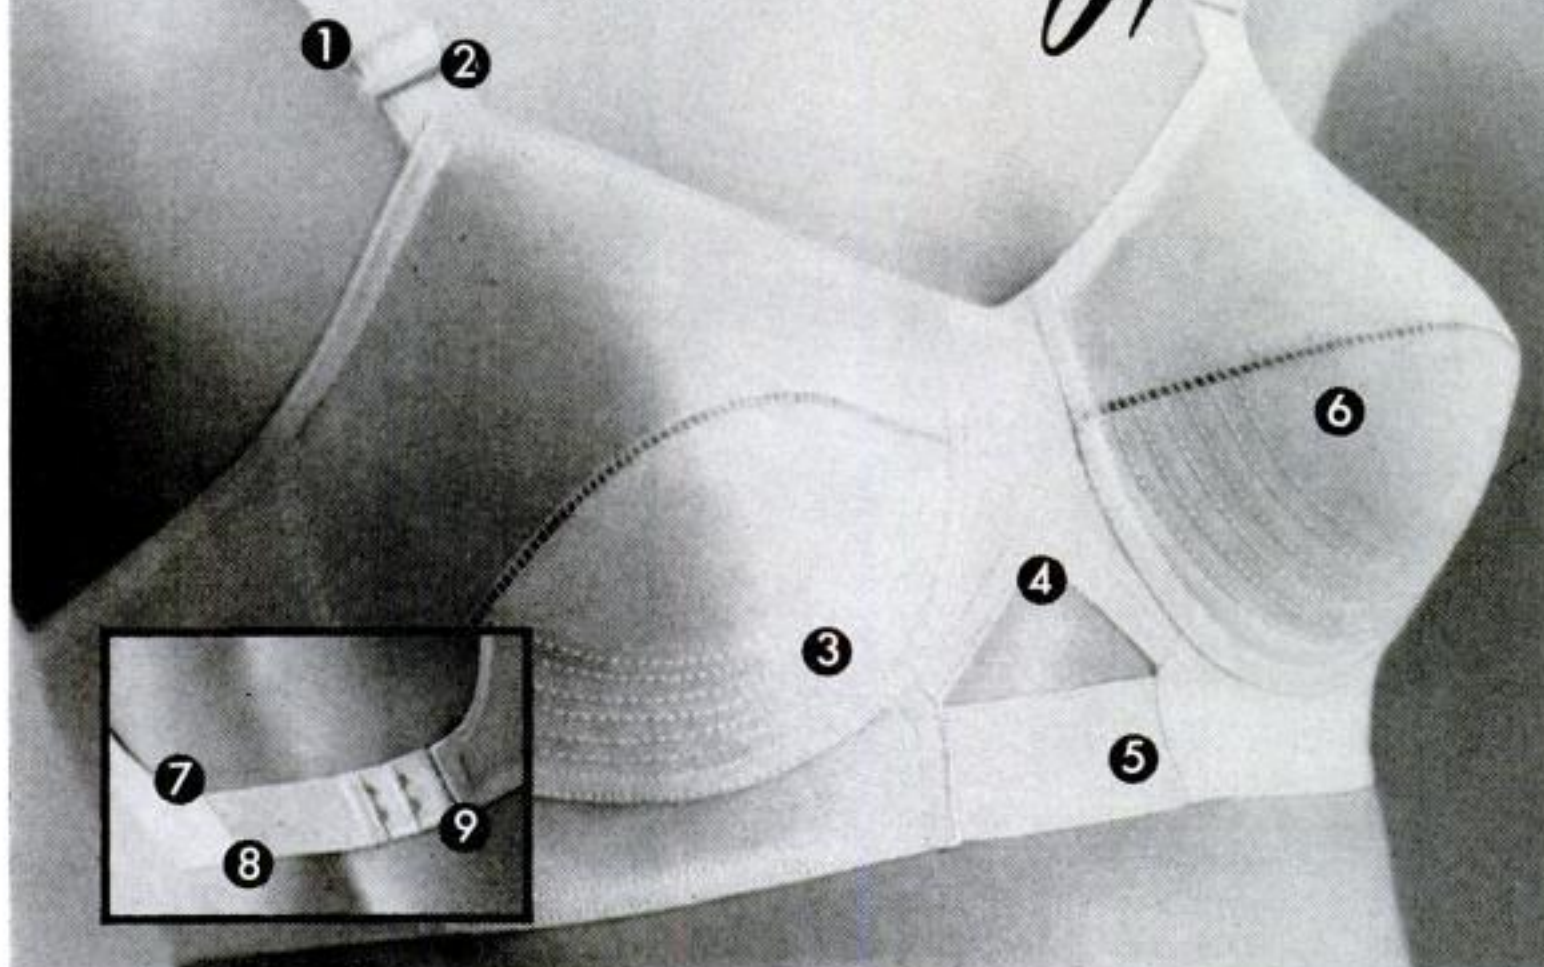

From Moscow came a rare photograph (below) of a Soviet citizen and his wife who were voting in last month's elections. Chubby and complacent, the pair obviously felt sure that they were voting for a winning candidate for the Supreme Soviet. The two confident voters, who have seldom before been photographed in public, were Premier Georgi Malenkov and his wife. Their candidate: Georgi Malenkov, who polled 99.79% of all the votes in his district.

MORE LIFE INSURANCE...

New York Life has a special new policy for you!

Now! For those who need at least $10,000 more life insurance—a special low-premium policy that builds high cash values fast!

New York Life takes another step forward with a life insurance policy which reflects the economies of bigger unit sales, a principle well-known in other lines of business.

What it is, in a sense, is life insurance in the "economy-size package." Because the minimum amount is $10,000, economies are possible which make the premiums much lower than they would otherwise be. For a man of 35, for example, the annual premium for standard life insurance is only $23.59 per $1,000. And rates are correspondingly low all along the line!

And another important thing: Low as the premiums are, this new policy builds up high cash values quickly—equal to the full reserve after only seven years!

New York Life is a mutual company and pays dividends to policy owners only. The dividends payable on this policy can be used to reduce premium payments or allowed to accumulate to increase the policy's cash value or applied under other available options. The low premiums, high cash values, and dividends combine to make this policy unusually attractive from a net cost viewpoint.

There are many other outstanding features about this new policy which make it a great insurance "buy" for both men and women. It is issued to age 70. An applicant who may not be able to qualify for standard insurance for reasons of health or occupation may be insurable under this policy at a higher rate. To prevent unintentional lapse, it offers automatic premium loan for two consecutive premiums. At most ages policies with waiver of premium and double indemnity benefits are available at slightly higher premium rates.

If you have been telling yourself that you ought to have more life insurance to protect your family or your business—but have been putting it off because you think you can't afford it—ask your New York Life agent for all the facts or mail the coupon below, today!

In the house you buy or build this spring, install super-sensitive Electronic Moduflow—and enjoy a new world of home comfort next winter! Costs $199.40 installed...easy terms...

Thermostat outside your house gives you wonderful Weather Control inside

Now is the time to plan ahead, to assure your comfort next winter with Honeywell Electronic Moduflow

Surely next winter you'll want to enjoy luxurious warmth you've never known before. And you can—because of an exciting new development in home temperature control. This new development is called Honeywell Electronic Moduflow.

Electronic Moduflow is an all-electronic temperature control system that features a thermostat mounted outside your house called the Electronic Weathercaster. It senses weather changes instantly;

Honeywell Electronic Moduflow, the result of years of research and testing, helps provide you with constant comfort by varying the indoor temperature in relation to the outside temperature. As outdoor temperatures go down, indoor temperatures must go up. This new home comfort principle outmodes conventional systems that merely hold temperature constant.

Electronic Moduflow is also available in a year 'round model—to control your central cooling plant in summer, too.

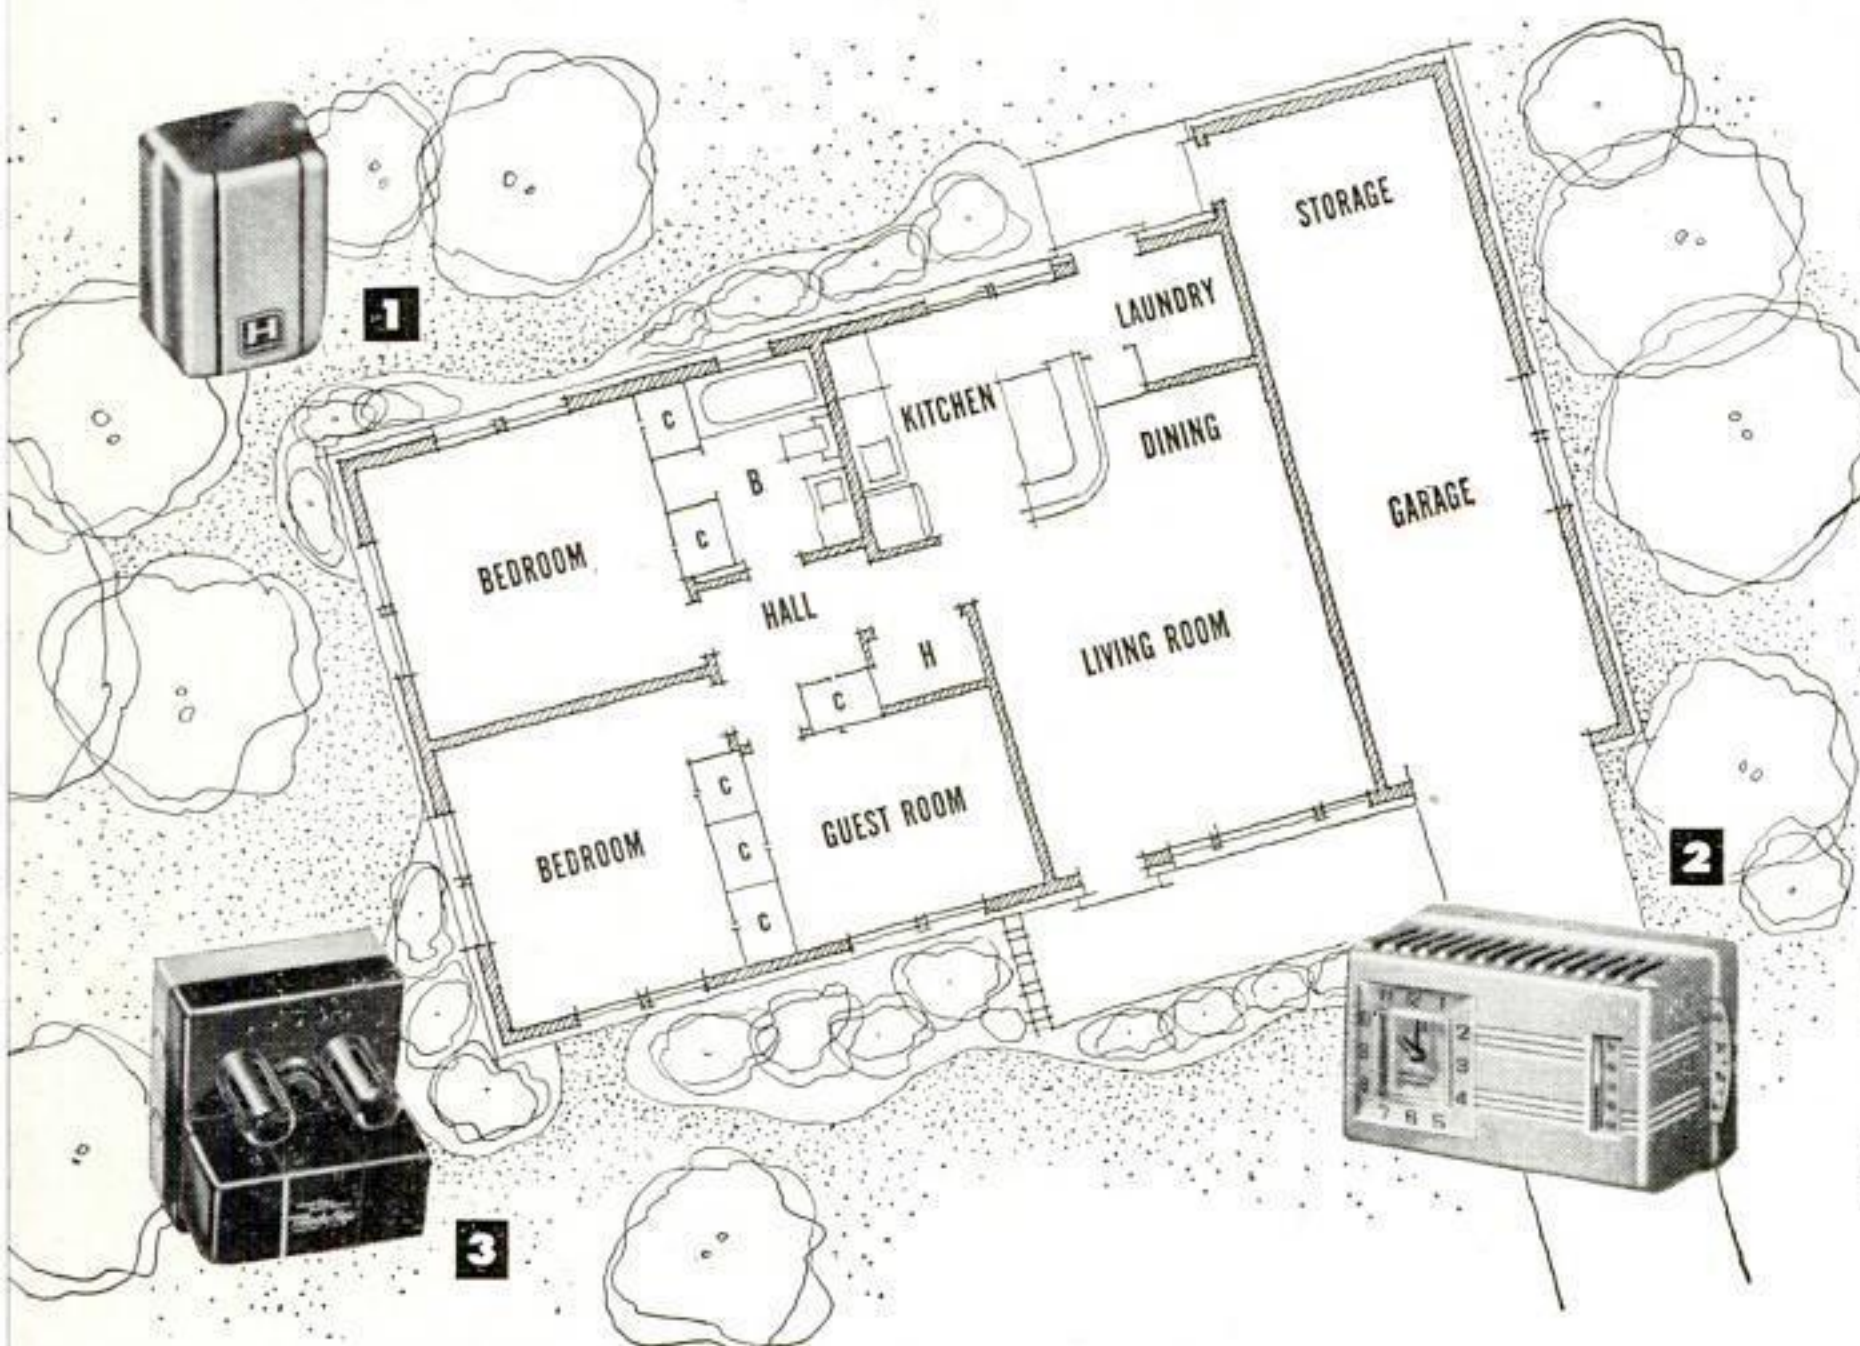

Look for Honeywell Electronic Moduflow when you're looking for a house to buy. Hundreds of builders from coast to coast are featuring it in their model homes.

Electronic Moduflow home in St. Louis. Price in St. Louis: $14,000. Builder: Milton Duenke. Planner: Lawrence E. Spellman. Electronic Moduflow was installed by Maplewood Sheet Metal Company.

What Electronic Moduflow is, and how it works

Only three simple parts make this wonderful system work. The Electronic Weathercaster (1), mounted outside the house, senses the outdoor temperature and by means of electronic signals continually tells the Electronic Clock Thermostat (2) what indoor temperature is required to maintain comfort. This Electronic Clock Thermostat, mounted in your living room, signals the Relay Amplifier (3) which automatically adjusts the heating plant to provide the amount of heat required to keep your home at the right temperature—no matter how changeable the winter weather might be.

*Milton Duenke,
a leading midwest builder*

Milton Duenke is vice-president of Vorhof-Duenke, a firm that has built hundreds of quality homes in 35 years. The "Hathaway", the house you see on this page, is typical of the firm's work. Builder Duenke recommends Honeywell Electronic Moduflow for every home he builds.

CHILLY OUTSIDE 71° INSIDE

Your body loses heat less rapidly on a mild winter day because walls are warmer. If you're average, you're comfortable with the room at 71°.

COLD OUTSIDE 73° INSIDE

Your home loses heat faster when the outdoor temperature drops, making walls colder. So Electronic Moduflow automatically raises room temperature—to keep your comfort constant.

Why you need varying indoor temperatures

Tests show that in winter, if indoor temperature is merely held constant as outdoor temperature falls, you feel chilly and uncomfortable. Because as the walls of your home become colder they "draw" increasing amounts of heat from your body. So Electronic Moduflow automatically changes the temperature indoors as the outside temperature varies.

It's easy to get Electronic Moduflow for your home

When you're buying a new house Electronic Moduflow can be included in your mortgage. This way it costs you only a few cents a day. In your present home Electronic Moduflow can be used with any type of adequate central heating plant. No carpentry or construction work is required. The price, $199.40, includes average installation cost. With a home improvement loan you can pay as little as $6.39 a month.

No house is a modern house without Electronic Moduflow

See your builder, heating dealer or architect today. Insist on the only truly modern comfort control system in your present home or the one you are planning to build or buy.

IN A RARE MOMENT OF ACTION THE POTTO, IRRITATED BY ELECTRIC LIGHTS, PLODS AWKWARDLY ACROSS THE FLOOR OF ITS NEW HOME ON CLUMSY PAWS

PHLEGMATIC POTTO

A little lemur takes hold in its new Texas home

One of the slowest animals in the animal kingdom is the Malayan slow loris (LIFE, Oct. 8, 1951). But the loris has an even slower cousin, the West African potto, which spends most of its time sleeping or hanging around on tree branches. Sometimes it eats lizards that happen by, but usually it is contented with tree shoots. In spite of this the phlegmatic potto, a member of the lemur family, has made a name for itself because of its powerful grip. Natives call it "Softly, Softly Catch Monkey," believing the little animal catches monkeys and holds on to them till they die.

The potto above, which was brought to the U.S. by Elton Chambers, a Texan recently returned from Liberia, readily adapted itself in most respects and spends most of its time sleeping or hanging from lampshades and coat racks. But a steady diet of strawberries and cream, the only dish it eats willingly, has left the little beast undernourished and recently its owners have had to feed it milk and Vitamin B-1 from an eye dropper.

← PREHENSILE GRIP is demonstrated by the potto, a full-grown male, who clings to spout of Egyptian coffeepot with three paws, still has an extra one free.

A Vision of Easter

BLAKE RETELLS SACRED STORY IN MYSTIC ART AND WORDS

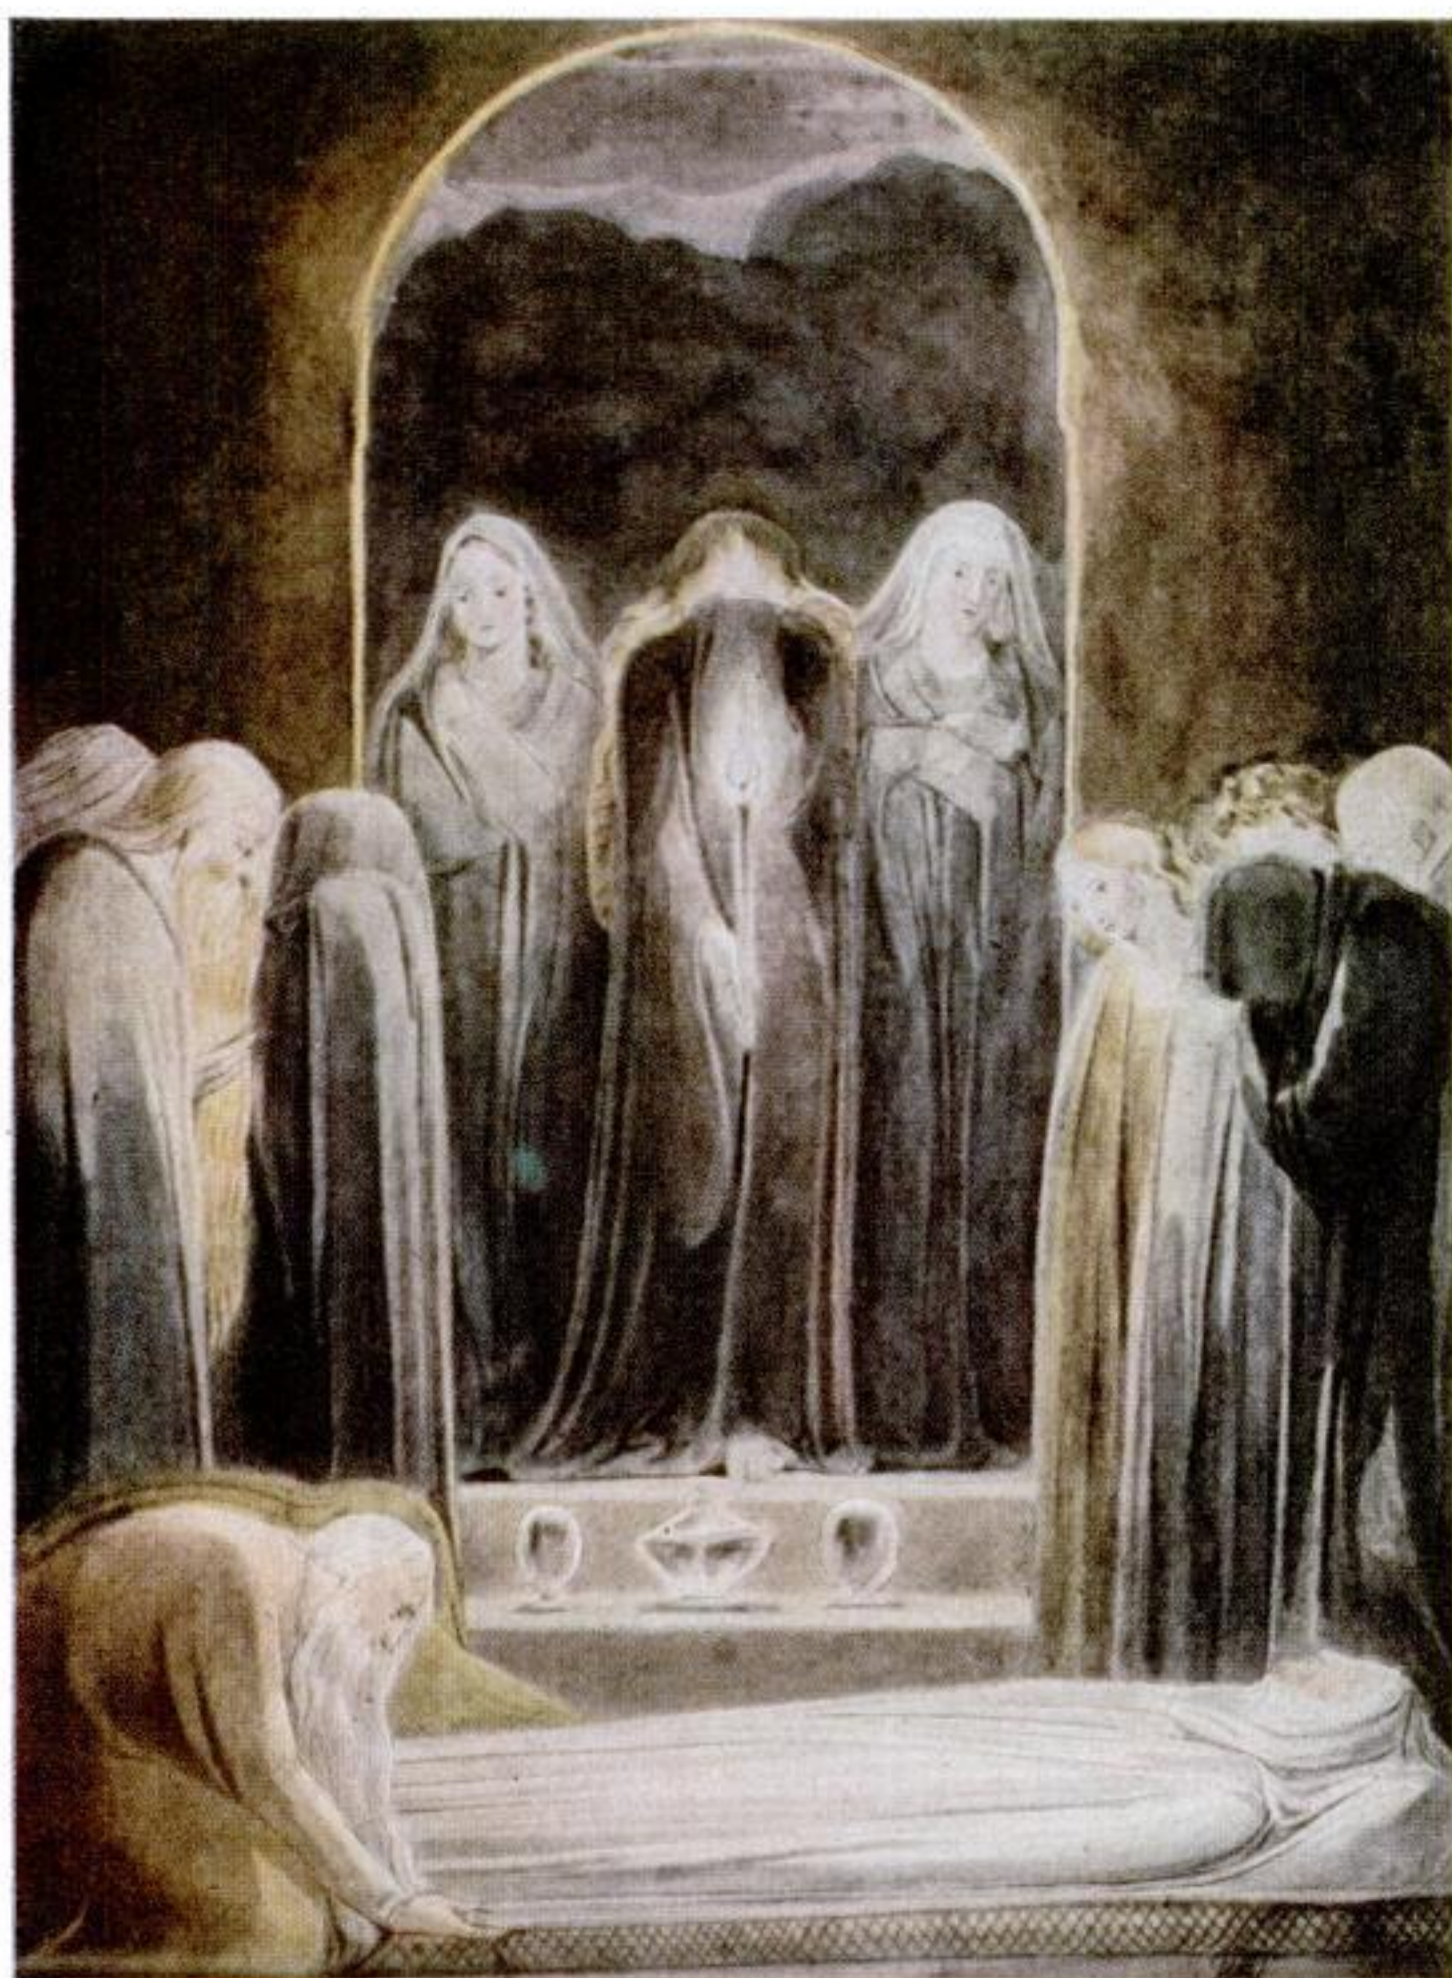

AROUND 1795 the English poet-painter William Blake was seized with a vision encompassing the great Easter drama, Christ's Crucifixion and resurrection from the tomb. Driven by his vision, Blake re-created Christ's sacrifice in an allegorical poem called The Four Zoas, Blake's name for reason, energy, desire and emotion. Then in a series of watercolors he portrayed the events in glimmering, reverent scenes as mystical as the poem to which they related and as unworldly as the vision which had inspired them.

These works, reproduced here with lines from his poem, were spurned by Blake's contemporaries as the hallucinations of a "madman." But the "madness" of his Easter allegory is recognized today as an inspirational approach to truth, and the shining spiritual aura of his paintings appears as a serene expression of the Easter theme: the triumph of the spirit over the material realities of the world.

"They nail'd him upon the tree of Mystery . . . and then mocking and then worshipping," they cast lots for his clothes.

Gently they "took the Body from the Cross, Jerusalem weeping over; They bore it to the Sepulcher . . . hewn in the rock of Eternity. . . ."

An angel of the Lord heaves back the stone that seals the tomb, "In the caverns of the grave . . . the Lamb of God has rent the Veil of Mystery."

Grieving women who have come to anoint Christ's body are met by an angel who tells them to mourn no more "for the Eternal Man is risen."

"Then sang the sons of Eden . . . 'Glory, Glory, Glory to the Holy Lamb of God. . . Now we behold redemption.'"

SELF-PORTRAIT catches Blake's intense gaze, as if seeing a vision.

BLAKE WAS ARTIST OF 'INWARD EYE'

Throughout his lifetime of nearly 70 years William Blake was consumed by visions. At the age of 4, "when God put His head to the window," he ran off screaming. Later he became accustomed to seeing angels walking among the haymakers and was delighted once to find the prophet Ezekiel beneath a tree. His father, a moderately well-to-do London hosier, reconciled himself to his son's odd ways, sent him to art school at the age of 10 and later apprenticed him to an engraver. With this training young Blake began his arduous career as a printer, engraver, illustrator and poet which provided him a modest living.

In 1782 Blake married the daughter of a market gardener after a simple courtship of three sentences. "Do you pity me?" he asked. "Yes, indeed I do," she replied. "Then I love you," said Blake. After teaching his wife to read and write, Blake trained her at his own trade, and during the next 45 years she was always at hand, helping to paint and bind his books and sitting near him as he wrote from his visions. These poetical writings, which poured forth with torrential rapidity, filled more than a dozen volumes which Blake printed himself. Had he not been his own printer, his work might have perished, for London publishers were unwilling to print the work of a man who was looked on as visionary and mad. This popular concept was abetted by Blake who asked at parties, "Did you ever see a fairy's funeral, madam?" or told about his dining with Isaiah and Ezekiel. When pressed, he admitted that his visions were "up here" (pointing to his head), seen with his "inward eye."

BLAKE'S HOME for three years was this cottage at Felpham. He had to leave it in 1804 because "the Visions were angry with me."

Such explanations failed to satisfy Blake's contemporaries, who were shocked not only by his "fancies" but by his opinions. A fiery champion of freedom and individuality, he was a revolutionary in politics, religion, morals and art. He wrote poems about America and the French Revolution, donned a liberty cap and called himself a "liberty boy." Like modern psychologists, he believed in freedom from repression. (He advocated a concubine system though he never adopted it himself.) He looked on Christ as the symbol of unrestrained love, as the opponent of convention and authoritarian religion and, above all, as an artist. Art, said Blake, is a means of "conversing with Paradise."

Blake's own art of classic lines and mystic spirit was out of fashion with the romantic school of his day, but in its monumental grace it shares in the great traditions of Western art. His poetry—best remembered in "Tiger, tiger, burning bright"—has fresh though baffling beauty which places it in the highest rank of English literature. All Blake's work was fed by his imagination which soon enveloped his life. Toward the end, his wife declared, he was "always in Paradise" and when he died "his bursts of gladness made the walls resound."

MASK, made at Blake's death in 1827, shows bulging brow he called sign of "republican."

All-Nylon cord! Up to 80% stronger than standard tires!

And now! 3 great 1954 extras!

- ✓ Even more mileage than last year!
- ✓ Much greater skid protection than in 1953!
- ✓ Quieter ride—less squeal on turns!

3. Quieter ride! 15% greater traction! Squealing on turns has been practically eliminated by a new anti-vibration tread design. And this new tread has 1806 inches of nonskid edges, 880 deep-cut safety-slots for 15% greater skid resistance. You'll get quicker, safer stops, better lateral skid resistance with this new tire.

There's a big difference in Nylon cord! Only Goodyear has Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon!

Nylon is the best tire cord—if the stretch can be controlled. Nylon is naturally stronger, pound for pound, than steel; it makes a lighter weight, cooler running, longer wearing tire. But, unless Nylon tire cords are properly pre-conditioned, they stretch under tension.

To control the stretch in Nylon cord, Goodyear has developed an exclusive process of chemically treating the cord and then putting it through a triple tempering process involving Tension, Temperature and Time.

The result—Goodyear's Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord.

Only Goodyear, with years of Nylon cord experience and a multi-million dollar investment in 3-T machines, has been able to successfully produce a Nylon cord that is fully controlled at its point of maximum strength and resiliency.

Be sure your Nylon cord tires are made with Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord—and that means Goodyear!

Toscanini Conducts Farewell Concert

EMOTION MAKES THE GREAT MAESTRO FALTER

Though 87, Arturo Toscanini never faltered musically as he went through his NBC Symphony season this year. But last week he came out at New York's Carnegie Hall for the last time. Few knew it, but the greatest of all orchestra conductors had resigned.

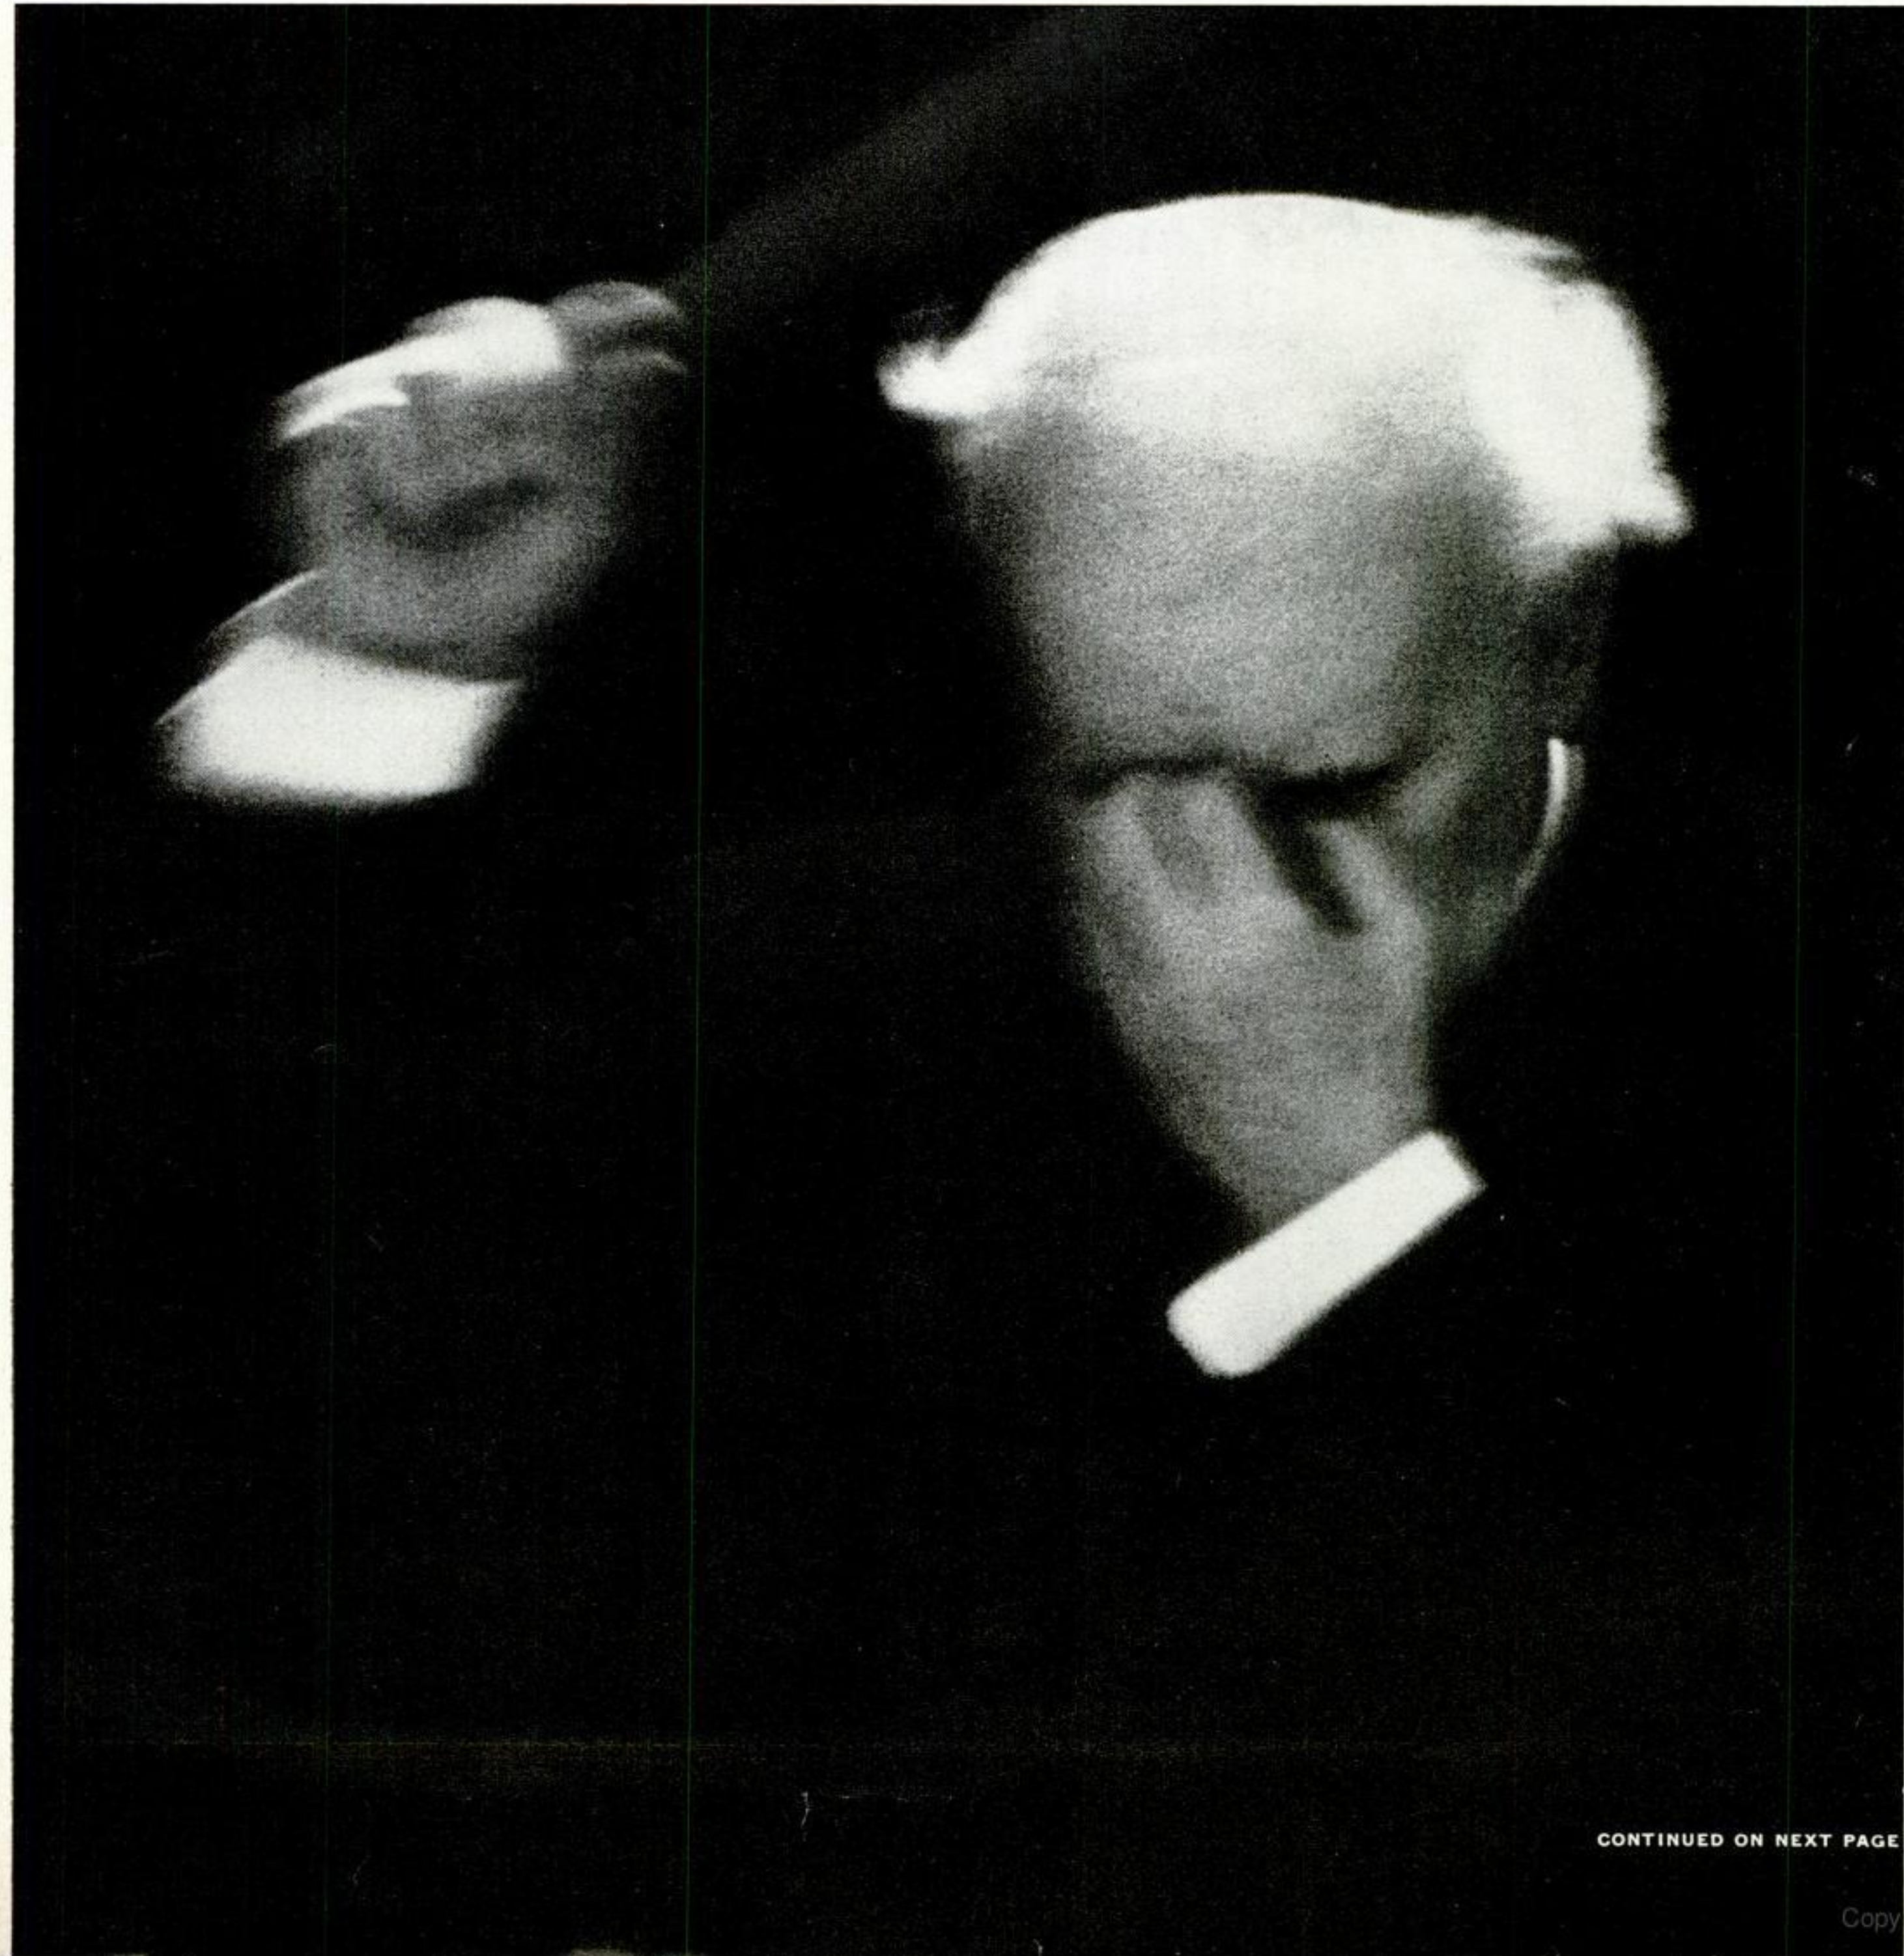

Once or twice Toscanini drove the orchestra into furies of magnificent sound. Once or twice, like a lion rousing himself, he shook his head and roared the melody. But then the firm beat faltered, the infallible memory failed.

Puzzled, he poked at his head (right), clutched his forehead (below). The musicians floundered. Offstage, his protégé, Conductor Guido Cantelli, shouted, "Cut it off!" The broadcast went off the air for 38 seconds, a record went on for radio listeners. But the maestro caught the beat again, led the musicians to a roaring climax. Even before the last measures ended, Toscanini tottered off, dropping his baton and weeping as he went. The applause went on and on, but he did not return.

Exotic Curry

SPICY AND PRETTY, IT IS PRACTICAL TO MAKE

There is no prettier meal to serve than curry nor any that leaves more latitude for experiment. A curry is not so much cooked in the kitchen as it is concocted in the imagination, for any kind of food—fish, fowl, meat or vegetable—can be used in it. And the variety of condiments which can be served with a curry seems boundless—anything from kitchen staples like potato chips to exotic specialties like crystallized violets.

Along with being exotic, curry is also practical. It may be made from leftovers, and actually tastes better when warmed up a day or two after cooking. Since a busy U.S. housewife can prepare it at her leisure, store it in the refrigerator and reheat it for her family or guests, the dish is being served with increasing regularity in the U.S. Added cause for its popularity is the discovery by experimenting cooks that curry does not need to be hair-raisingly hot but can be made as bland as taste demands. The four recipes on the following pages are basic, but variations are almost unlimited.

Shown at left are three curry dishes, two rice dishes and 30 condiments. Starting lower left in the round bowl is Indian chicken curry. The traditional condiments circling it in brass dishes with wooden handles are, from left, white raisins, dark raisins, chopped chives, chopped baked ham, shredded Bombay duck, mustard pickle, pickled walnuts, crumbled potato chips. At bottom left in the pink bowl are crystallized rose petals. Above the bowl of curry are kumquats. Above them is fresh chutney and at top left rice pilau. An alternate is the rice with chopped parsley in the big pink bowl. In the center foreground is chutney, behind which are chopped peanuts and shredded coconut. Behind the Indian sacred-cow bell are chopped lemon peel and orange marmalade (at left), fresh scallions and radishes, a bowl of pickles. Foreground right is shrimp curry. In front of it from left are watermelon pickles, crystallized violets, chopped lime peel; behind it are chopped egg yolk, sweet pickled onions, salted coconut flakes. In the brass bowl above the shrimp is curried lamb circled from left by guava jelly, chopped egg white, crystallized ginger, chopped green olives, chopped bacon. Behind the lamb curry is spicy lemon pickle and to the right, preserved ginger. Fresh fruits make the best dessert to serve with curry.

BASIC CURRY RECIPES INVITE VARIATIONS

The meat, fish and vegetables on the opposite page suggest the wide range of food that can be curried. The spices and other ingredients are a few commonly used in curry sauces. Starting at the lower left opposite are lobsters. Right of the lobsters are a lemon, four walnuts with a scoop full of shelled walnuts behind them. Back of scoop is a bowl full of lentils. Surrounding lentils, from bottom, are whole black pepper, curry powder, salt, brown sugar, cayenne pepper, whole ginger. Left of Indian elephant-headed god is white wine. Either this or beer should be served with curry. Behind wine is a bowl of garlic bulbs, a tray of tomatoes, peas, string beans. Right of vegetables is a basket of curry powders, Worcestershire sauce. At upper right is a basket of eggs in front of which is a leftover roast turkey. Left of turkey are a bowl of walnuts, a tray of striped bass, sea trout, red snapper. To right of fish are red onions. In front of them are celery, lemons, limes, apples, used in curry sauces. Left of these is round steak. At lower right are coconuts and crabs.

There are over 200 varieties of imported and domestic curry powders available in the U.S. According to the curry authority, Florence Brobeck, author of Cooking With Curry, an experimental cook will try mild, hot and medium curry powders—just as she will use different ingredients to explore the unlimited variations possible in curry.

INDIAN CHICKEN CURRY

- | | |
|-----------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| 3 two-pound fryers, cut up | 4 medium-sized apples, cored, |
| 1 cup vegetable oil | pared and chopped |
| 1 cup finely chopped celery | $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon cayenne pepper |
| 1 cup finely chopped onions | $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon freshly ground |
| 3 tablespoons curry powder | black pepper |
| | 2 teaspoons salt |

Heat oil in heavy skillet, brown chicken. Remove chicken and set aside. Add celery and onions to oil in skillet. Cook until onions are golden brown. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and cook over low heat for 30 minutes. Place chicken in skillet with mixture, add 2 cups boiling water, cover and continue cooking over low heat 45 to 60 minutes or until chicken is tender. Serves 6. Turkey, duck or capon can be substituted for chicken. If leftovers are used, prepare the sauce separately and add the leftovers 15 minutes before serving.

SHRIMP CURRY

- | | |
|--|------------------------------|
| 3 pounds shrimp | 2 cups fresh milk |
| 3 coconuts | 2 tablespoons finely chopped |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ cup butter | whole ginger (or 1 teaspoon |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ cup finely chopped onion | ground ginger) |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ cup flour | 3 tablespoons lemon juice |
| 2 tablespoons curry powder | 1 tablespoon salt |

Shell and clean shrimp. Pierce eyes of 3 coconuts and drain milk. (If yield is less than 3 cups add water to make 3 cups.) Crack coconuts and grate meat. Heat coconut milk and pour over grated coconut. Let stand 20 minutes and drain. (Save grated coconut to use as condiment with curry.) Melt butter in large saucepan. Add onion and cook until transparent. Add flour and curry powder and stir. Add coconut milk and fresh milk and cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Add shrimp, ginger, lemon juice and salt. Cook uncovered over low heat for 30 minutes. Stir frequently. Serves 6. Any lean fish or shellfish cut in small pieces can be substituted for shrimp. Hard-cooked eggs can be used instead of seafood. Sauce should be prepared separately and quartered hard-cooked eggs added 10 to 15 minutes before serving. Note: If fresh coconut is unobtainable, combine 3 cups shredded coconut with 3 cups fresh milk and let stand 20 minutes. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Strain.

To prepare whole ginger, cover with cold water and soak for one hour. Strain, squeeze out water and chop.

- | | |
|--------------------------------|---|
| 3 pounds lamb shoulder or neck | 4 tablespoons brown sugar |
| 4 tablespoons flour | 4 tablespoons raisins |
| $\frac{1}{4}$ cup butter | 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce |
| 2 cloves garlic, minced | 2 lemons, sliced |
| 4 large onions, sliced | 4 tablespoons shredded coconut |
| 4 small apples, cored, | $\frac{1}{2}$ cup broken walnuts |
| pared and chopped | $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon grated lime peel |
| 4 tablespoons curry powder | 1 tablespoon salt |

Cut meat into 2- or 3-inch squares. Dredge with flour. Melt butter in large saucepan. Add meat, garlic and onions and brown lightly, stirring constantly. Add apples and curry powder and cook 5 minutes more. Then add 2 cups of water and remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer for one hour or until meat is tender. Serves 6. Beef, veal or pork can be substituted for lamb. Almost any leftover vegetable may be added to curry during last 10 minutes of cooking.

PAUL DOUGLAS, WALTER PIDGEON, WILLIAM HOLDEN, FREDRIC MARCH, LOUIS CALHERN AND DEAN JAGGER STRUGGLE FOR POWER IN SUITE OF DEAD EXECUTIVE

Eight Stars in a Boardroom

M-G-M SHOOTS THE WORKS IN A FILM FOR ITS 30TH ANNIVERSARY

For the film to celebrate its 30th anniversary in motion pictures this May, M-G-M has picked Executive Suite, made from Cameron Hawley's best-selling novel. And for Executive Suite, the studio picked a fabulous cast of eight stars—the first film in a long time in which the stars outnumber the bit players. It was graphic, and probably not accidental, proof that M-G-M, long vaunted as the studio of the stars, could still throw in an all-American lineup if it felt like it.

From both a box-office and critical viewpoint it was a good thing M-G-M felt like it. Without the attraction of top stars, a story about how five vice presidents of a furniture factory, their associates and their pretty womenfolk argue their way into choosing one of their number as president would have about as much pulling power as a free lecture on postwar Swedish monetary reform—maybe less. As it is, the film has pulling power aplenty. The stars, at their very best, integrate their roles so well that it is hard to say which one shines brightest. The suspense, right up to the final scene above, is managed as tautly and surprisingly as a first-rate mystery thriller. And for a while at least you may even wonder who is going to get the job—sinister, calculating, profit-minded Bookkeeper Fredric March or capable, earnest, quality-loving Designer William Holden.

BARBARA STANWYCK, the founder's daughter, hated company for killing its chief, whom she loved.

JUNE ALLYSON, wife of young executive Holden, begs him not to neglect his family for top job.

SHELLEY WINTERS, Paul Douglas' secretary, is surprised in extra-office love affair with her boss.

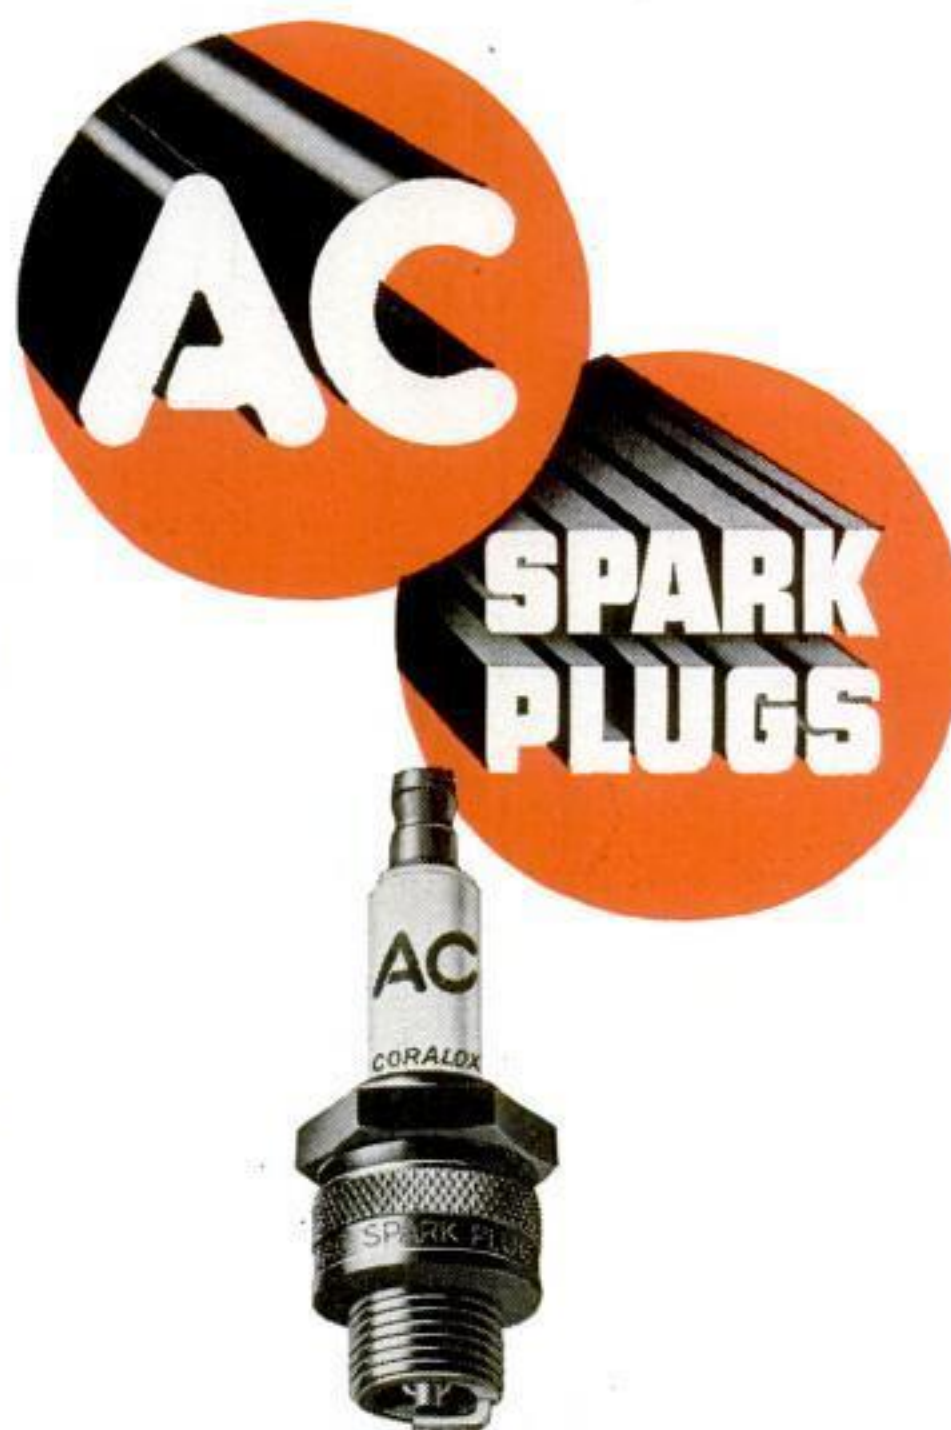

GIVE YOUR CAR WINGS FOR SPRING

ACs Give A Boost To Power and Save on Gasoline...

The ability of AC Spark Plugs to step up power and cut down fuel waste stems from their patented CORALOX Insulators.

Developed solely by AC, this material is so strong that it permits the forming of longer, thinner insulator tips. These tips heat up much more quickly than ordinary types to burn away oil and wet carbon deposits. With this major cause of misfiring eliminated, ACs fire more smoothly and evenly under all conditions.

Automotive engineers recommend that you change spark plugs every 10,000 to 12,000 miles. To preserve peak performance, install a new set of ACs.

Yes—a new set of AC Spark Plugs can be a “spring tonic” to the winter-weary engine of your car. They stay cleaner longer and fire more reliably—send engine performance, and your own spirits, soaring.

In fact many motorists have found that they get—power increases ranging up to 10% and gasoline savings of as much as one gallon in ten—when they replace fouled and worn plugs with sparkling new ACs.

No matter what make or model car you drive, there is an AC Spark Plug specially engineered to help your engine develop its top performance potential. To make your engine really sing this spring . . . to get performance that actually seems to be winged . . . insist on AC Spark Plugs the next time you change plugs in your car.

ACs SM-O-O-TH Your Way Mile After Pleasant Mile...

AC Oil Filters guard the precision parts of your engine by filtering out damaging dirt, grit and sludge. They trap minute particles as small as 1/100,000 of an inch, keep engine oil clean and safe. For positive protection, change to a new AC filter every 4000 to 6000 miles.

ACs Work Tirelessly To Wing You On Your Way...

AC Fuel Pumps feed the carburetors of 90% of the nation's motor vehicles . . . an amazing tribute to AC excellence! Fuel pumps have an unusual “life expectancy” . . . but it's a wise precaution to change to a new AC after several seasons to prevent the possibility of trouble before it develops.

BEFORE RACE resolute Oxford stroke, J.J.H. Harrison, strides to boat for the grim test ahead.

OXFORD LEADS Cambridge early in the 4.2-mile race as boats bearing press and officials chug behind.

THE BIG 100TH TO OXFORD

Underdog wins over Cambridge

The determined tread and visage of the oar-toter at left is that of a man with a mission. All during winter practice J.J.H. Harrison, stroke of the Oxford University crew, had been straining at his oar. He and his mates had rowed 700 miles to get ready for just one race, the one with Cambridge. The fact that this was the 100th race in a historic series added to the urgency of the situation.

The night before, Harrison and his mates had taken phenobarbital to deaden their jumpy nerves and insure a good night's sleep. They were the underdogs as they strode solemnly out to their shell while 150,000 spectators lined the Thames River in London.

Oxford's oarsmen spurted ahead at the start and never lost the lead. At one point Cambridge wobbled dangerously in choppy water and one onlooker said in happy anticipation, "Maybe we're going to see a sinking." Nothing but Cambridge's spirits sank, as Oxford's soared (right). Oxford's victory was its 45th—against Cambridge's 54 and one tie—in the hundred meetings which have produced some stirring and surprising races (following pages).

ODD MOMENTS OF 100 RACES

FIRST RACE in 1829 was rowed in crude longboats much heavier than modern shells. Cambridge, which lost, wore pink scarves; Oxford, straw hats.

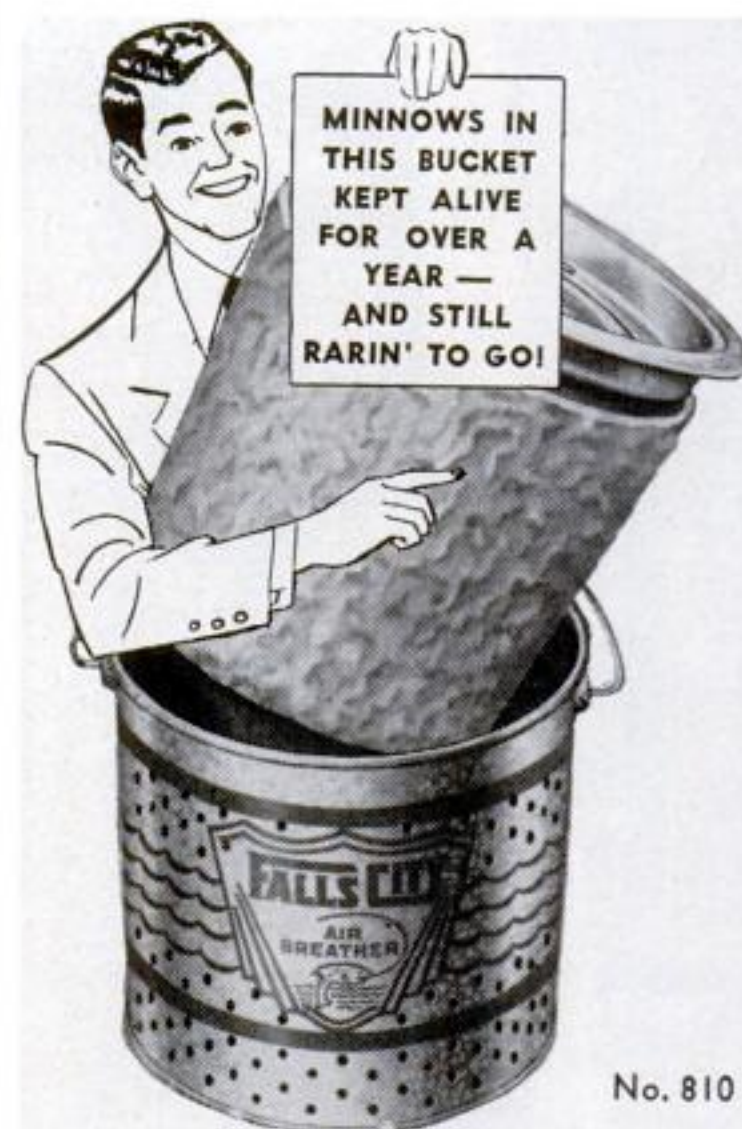

WET WINNERS from Oxford wade ashore amid congratulations of friends after 1863 race. Their boat finished the race but sank a few yards from shore.

BIG BLIZZARD failed to stop the race in 1872. Cambridge won despite broken rudder. Two years ago race was again rowed in a heavy snowstorm.

DEAD HEAT took place in 1877 when Oxford, with a big lead, broke an oar. Cambridge's rowers, who were far behind, took heart and came on for a tie.

DOUBLE DISASTER occurred in 1912. At top Cambridge crew sits partly submerged as Oxford (bottom) struggles to keep going. Both finally foundered.

ROUGH WATER in 1951 bothered both shells. Oxford, "catching crabs" in foreground, sank later. The race was called off and rerun. Cambridge won.

Ballantine Beer watches your belt-line

...with fewer calories than any other leading beer

It's good to know that nowadays practically all beers are lower in calories than they used to be . . . that all are starch-free . . . that none has more than a negligible trace of sugar.

Especially good to know—if you're counting up your calorie quota—that independent laboratory tests show Ballantine has fewer calories than any other leading beer.

But Ballantine, you know, not only watches your beltline. Ballantine Beer is brewed to the American taste as well as to the American figure.

Ballantine Beer is the product of 114 years of brewing experience. Brewed from nature's finest barley malt and hops, it has the same full flavor and fine character that have made it one of America's largest selling beers.

THE GROWING TREND TO LINCOLN

LET LINCOLN SHOW YOU WHAT

1. Lincoln Capri Convertible showing new look from the rear. 2. Lincoln Capri Custom Coupe in Regent Black and Columbia Blue.

IF YOU see a house that is low and glass-walled, a country club whose buildings fit the terrain, people whose living is up-to-the-moment, you'll become aware of a new trend in modern motoring—the growing trend to Lincoln.

With those whose living is modern, the trend is toward beauty with a purpose—as in the new 1954 Lincoln. And a good long look tells you why you see an ever-increasing number of Lincolns on the road.

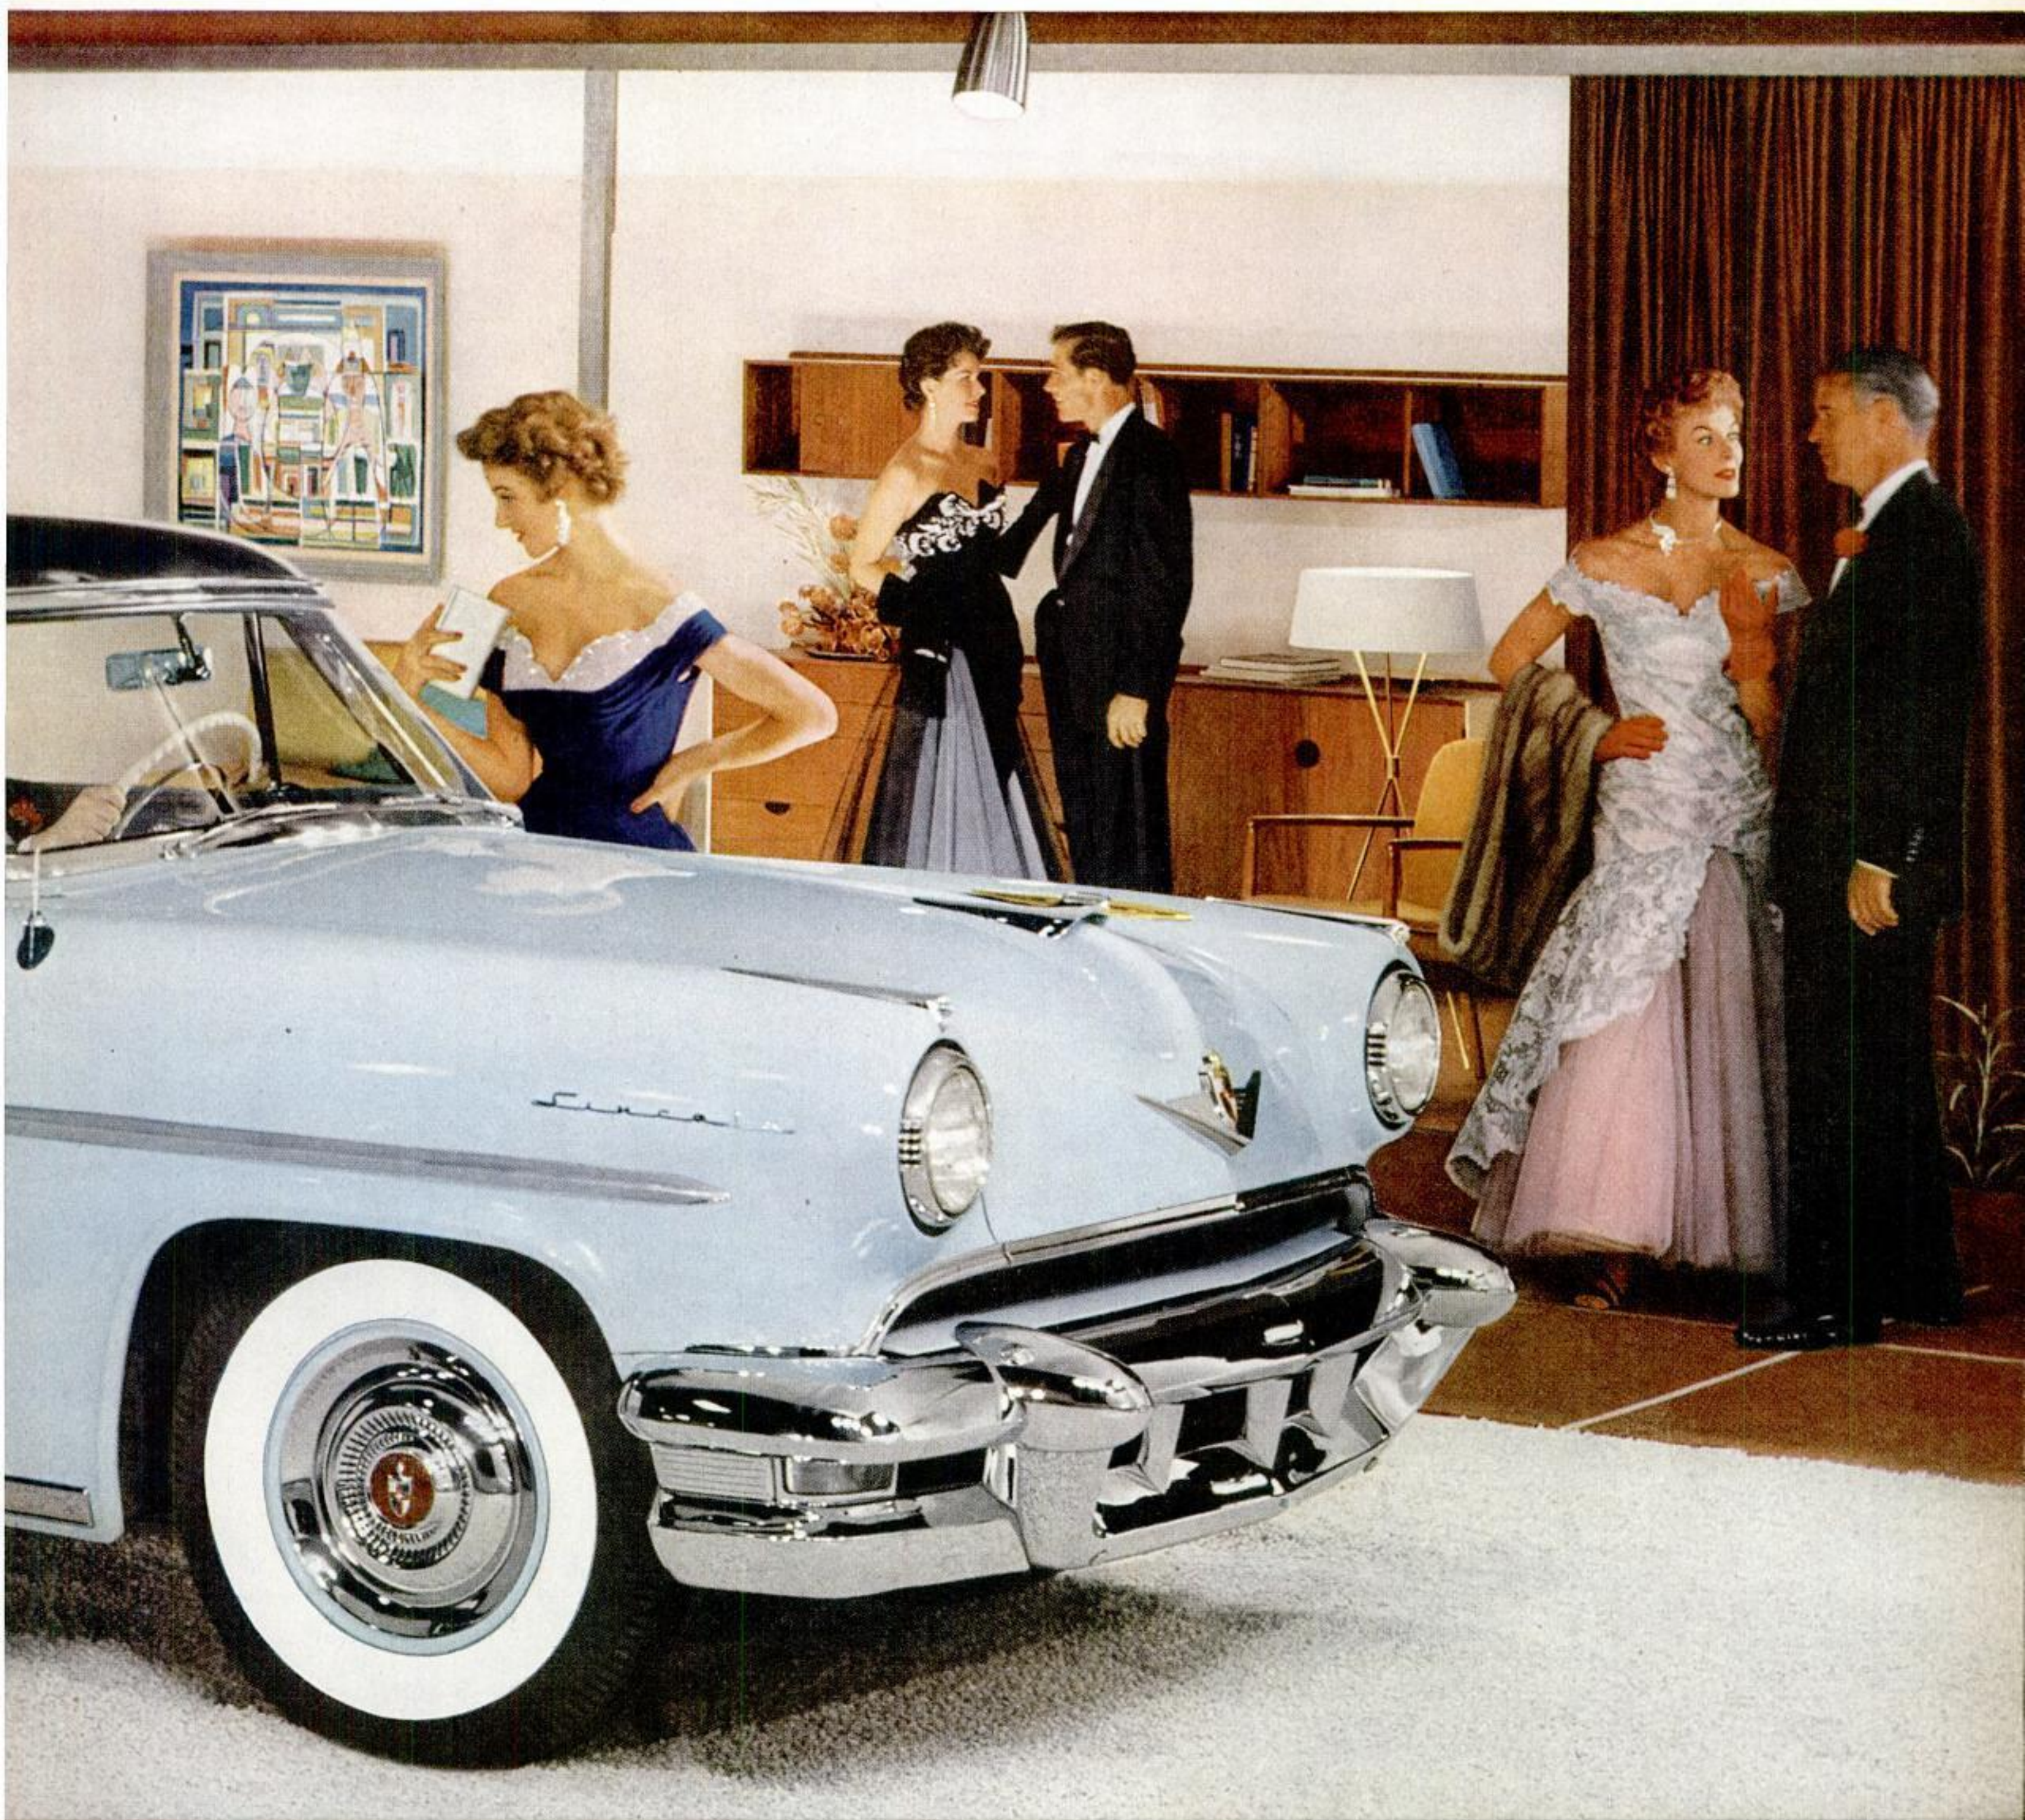

From the outside, you see an uncompromisingly straight design. No bulging sides nor curving fenders, not a trace of useless line. Striking new styling front and rear, a new look along the sides that is the spirit of 1954. The sides are flat, the fender line is crisp, the car has the clean-lined look of modern design. Inside, you learn even more.

You've never seen such dramatic colors and fabrics on wheels before. Nylons, gabardines, broadcloths, genuine leathers (available in Capri sedans as well as in convertibles and coupes)—with shades ranging from pale ivory to glowing reds and deepest blacks.

Next—you try the magnificent V-8 engine and discover why this power plant has been acclaimed by many engineers as the finest that ever came off a production line. There's new lift and life with the aid of Lincoln's new 4-barrel carburetor. Never have you received such response from so light a toe-touch. Never have you known such superb control. For only Lincoln among fine cars gives you ball-joint front wheel suspension for better handling. And you can have Lincoln's power steering, power brakes, the 4-way power seat, and electric power window lifts.

If you like your living modern, if you want to drive the way you live, there is only one thing to do. Accept your Lincoln dealer's invitation to try a Lincoln or the Lincoln Capri. We believe you will never go back to old-fashioned driving!

HUMMINGBIRD GLIDES OVER SAN FRANCISCO, HAVING GAINED ALTITUDE WITH ENGINE AND PROPELLER STANDING ON TRIPOD JUST BEHIND COCKPIT

A NEW SIGHT IN SOARING

Unique glider has an engine and propeller which help get craft off the ground and then disappear

At an airport near San Francisco last week the strange, streamlined craft shown above sputtered noisily down a runway and took off. Its flimsy-looking engine, mounted on a gawky tripod behind the cockpit, was turning out 40 hp despite its insecure look. When the craft had gained altitude, the engine retracted into the fuselage and disappeared (below), leaving the newest thing in glider planes to soar silently over the city.

The unique plane, named the Hummingbird, takes most of the risk out of the sport of gliding. It also eliminates the cost of being towed at the take-off. Inventor Ted Nelson and Designer Harry Perl got the idea of building a glider with a disappearing engine after 18 years of flying engineless craft. The first model so impressed other glider enthusiasts that Nelson and Perl are building six others for sale. The price: $7,000.

SECONDS AFTER THE PICTURE AT TOP, ENGINE HAS VANISHED COMPLETELY FROM VIEW, RETRACTED INTO THE FUSELAGE TO CUT DOWN ON AIR RESISTANCE

can it be?

Try Carling's Red Cap Ale

...and see!

At Carling's we brew both beer and ale—and each is mighty popular. But more and more people are telling us Carling's Red Cap Ale gives them more pleasure than any beer they ever tasted. They say it's light and dry as the smoothest beer, yet with that extra flavor—that "heart" which only a fine ale can provide! They call it the "light-hearted" ale.

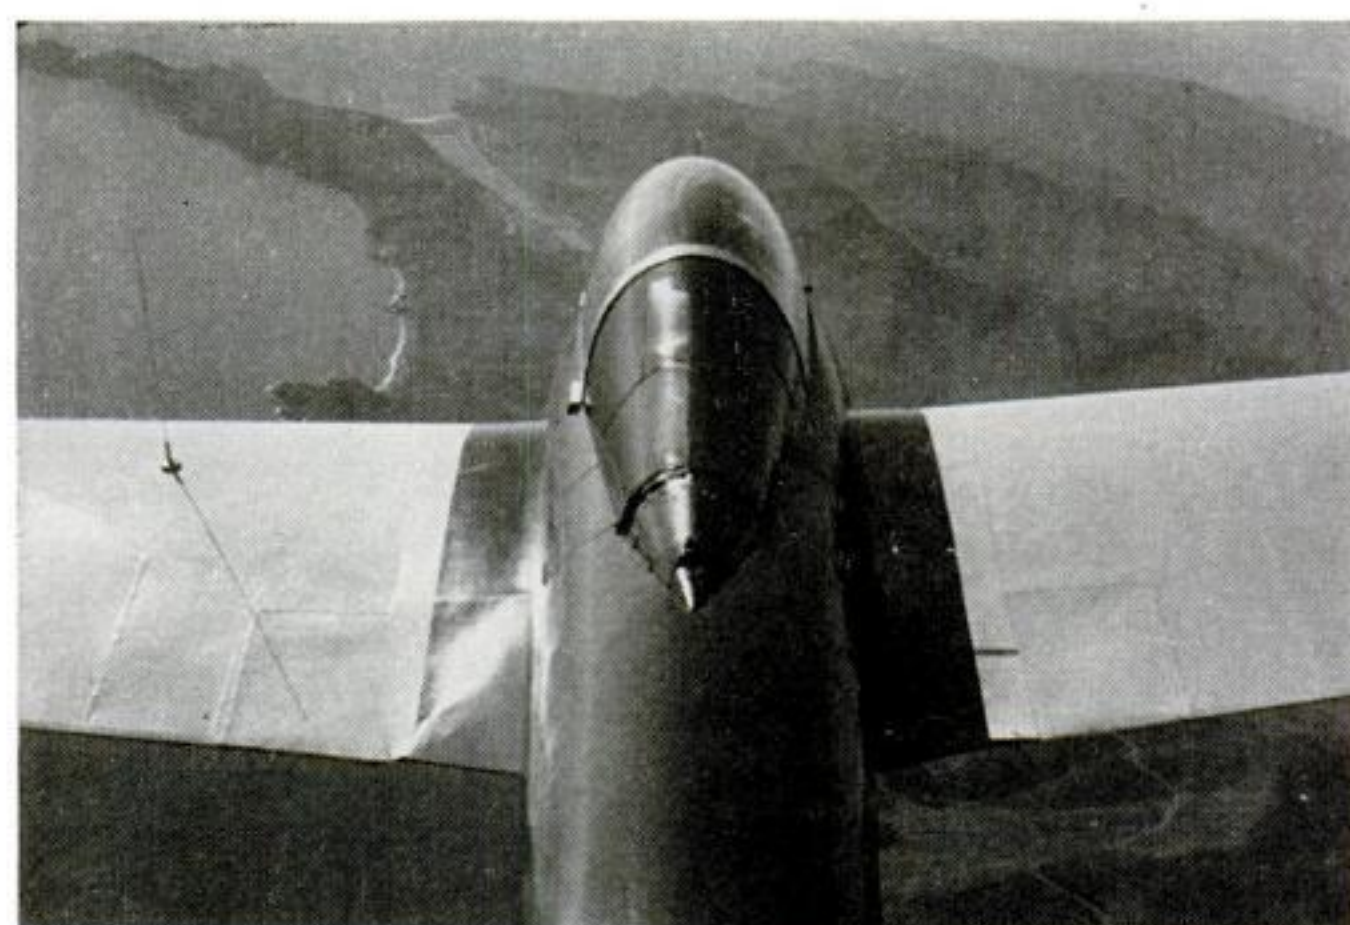

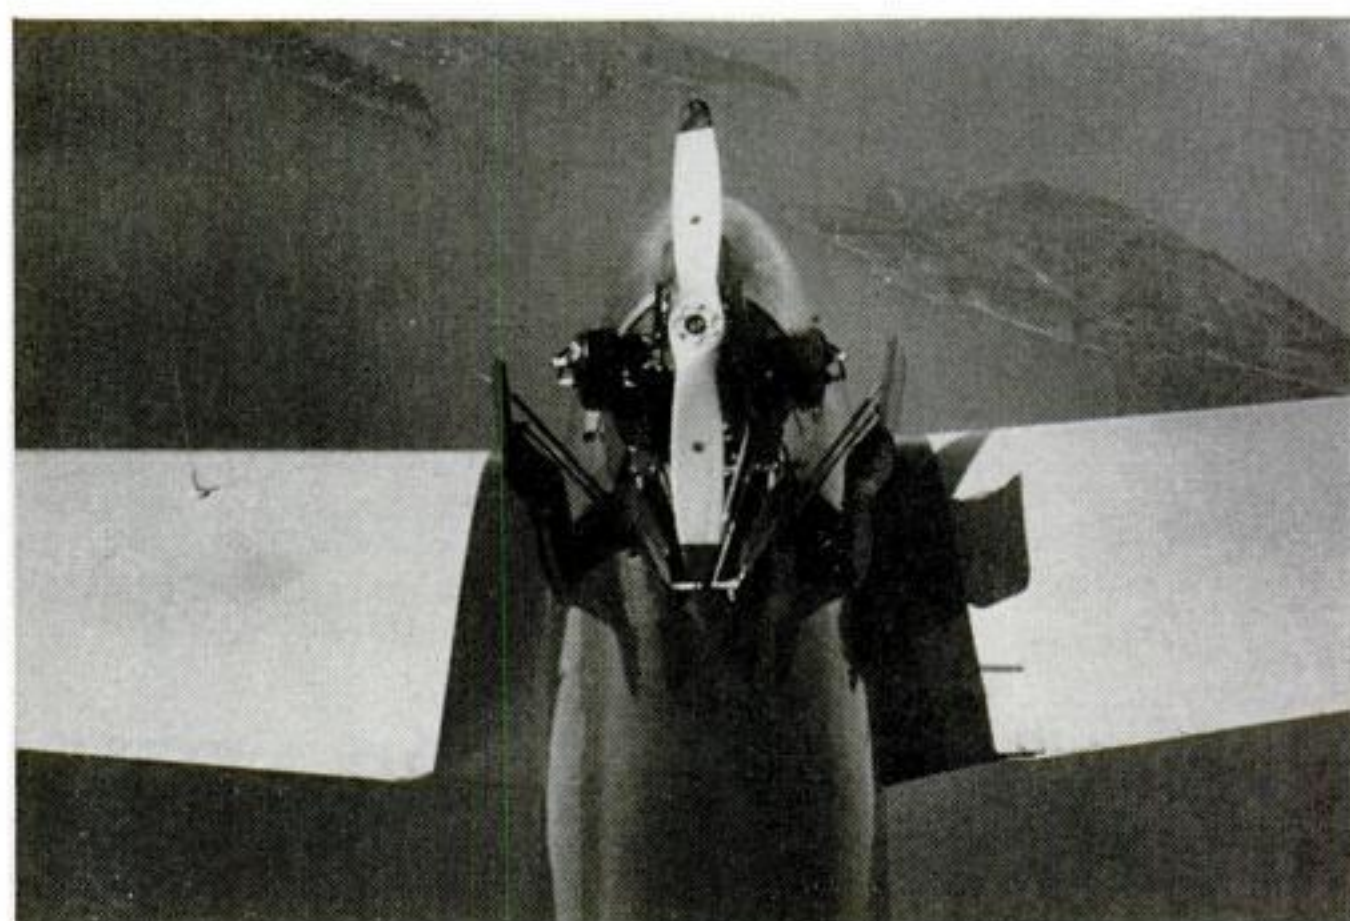

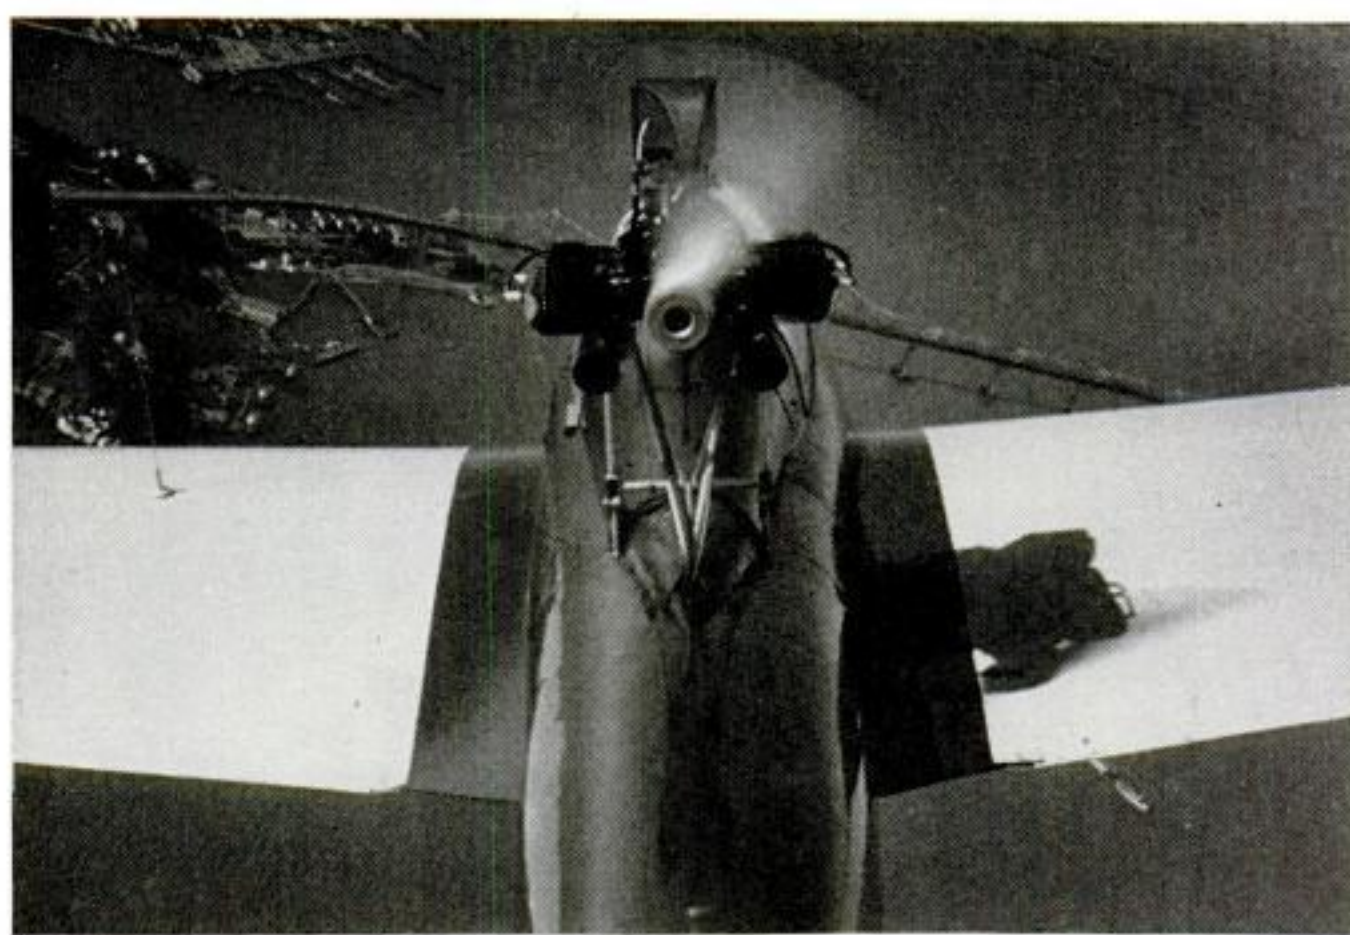

Tonight, why not try it? See whether you are one of those who find Carling's Red Cap Ale tastes even better than beer!

HALF-DROWNED JULIA ADAMS IS LUGGED OFF BY TOWERING GILL MAN, HALF MAN, HALF FISH, WHO LURKS IN WATERS OF AMAZON TO ATTACK HER FRIENDS

Julia in Jeopardy

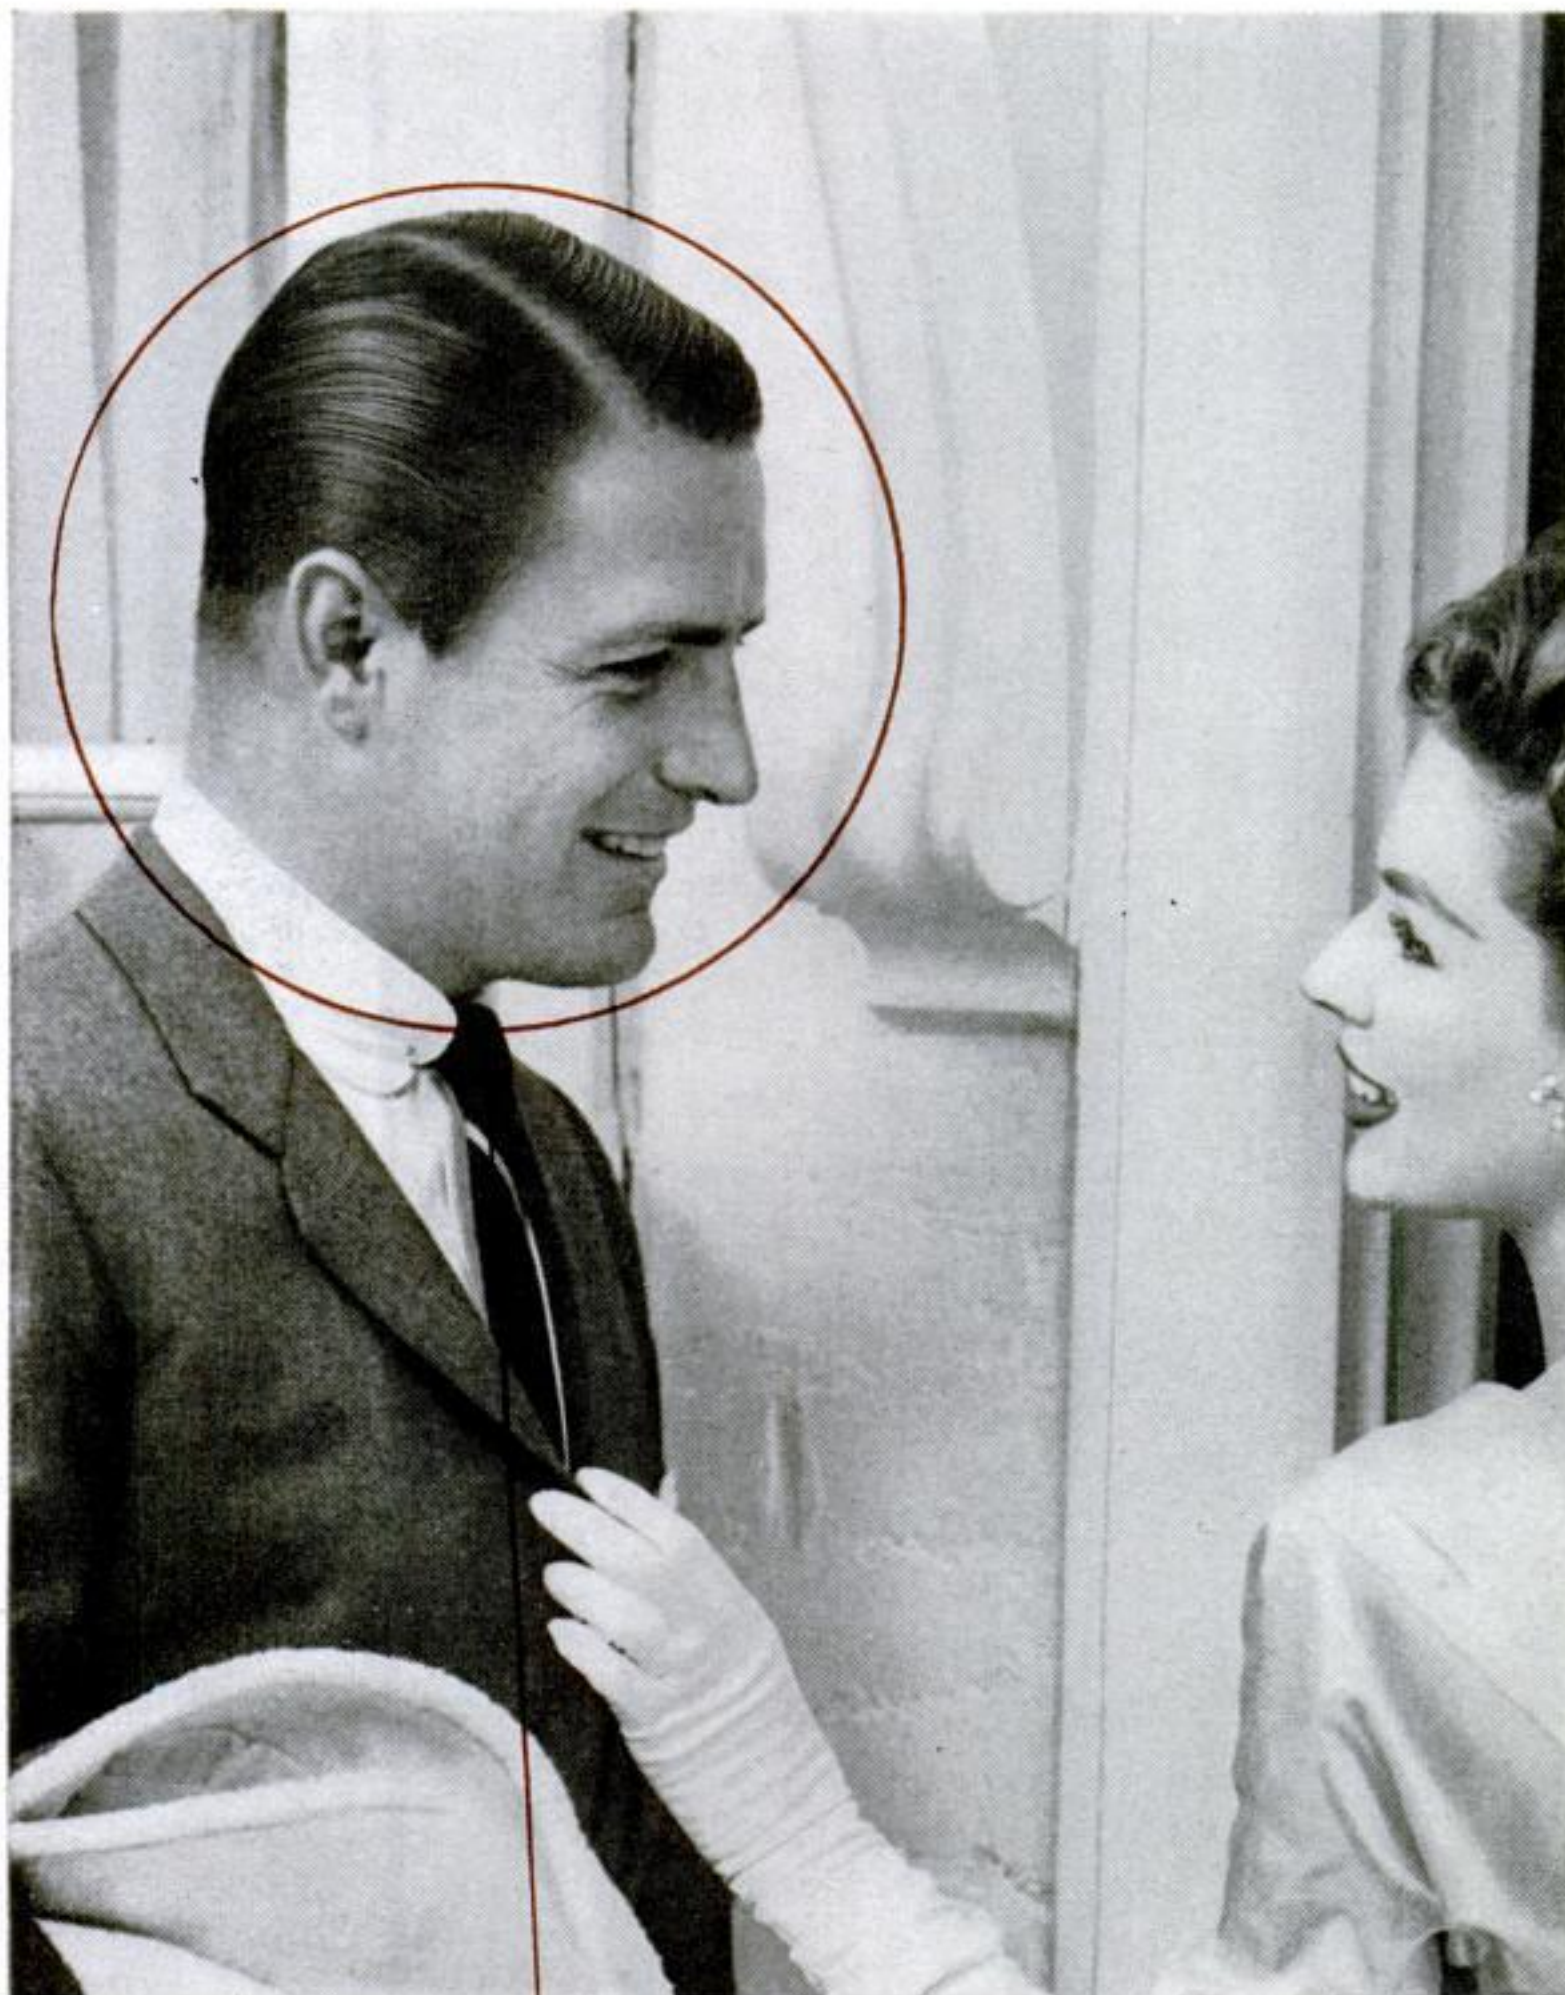

NOW IT'S A GILL MAN

Not since the old Pearl White—Perils of Pauline serials—has a movie heroine undergone such consistent mayhem at the hands of villainous antagonists as Universal's starlet, Julia Adams. Brought to Hollywood four years ago from Arkansas for her beauty and acting talent, Julia has spent about 100 hours in the water and in danger of being drowned or devoured by monsters, has dodged all kinds of hazardous weapons, including flaming arrows, has fired over 1,000 rounds of ammunition and put in five days bound in fake wound-appliances. She has spent 300 hours on the backs of studio horses and one unintentional, nearly fatal moment under their stampeding hoofs.

Julia's current opus is Creature from the Black Lagoon, a science fictioner in which she had hoped her perils would end and her acting begin. But she swallowed her disappointment when she wound up (above) in the arms of a 6-foot 5-inch Gill Man, who keeps her amply jeopardized, most of the time under water.

The answer to all these questions is COOLERATOR

Why risk seeing your air conditioning unit rust away, when you can select the one that is completely rust-proofed—inside and out? Coolerator is built of bonderized zinc-coated steel, covered with two coats of high-baked enamel—no corrosion, no chipping or cracking, no yearly repainting needed.

Why put up with a clumsy, space-wasting unit—when you can choose smartly designed Coolerator? It extends barely beyond your window sill, has a smooth, flat top that can hold plants or ornaments, no side vents to interfere with draperies. And the exclusive Mirror-tone finish harmonizes anywhere.

Why not get the most for your money? That's Coolerator, with automatic thermostat control at no extra cost, two permanent filters, double-action exhaust to draw out stale room air, oiled-for-life motors, splatter-free moisture removal, and many other wonderful features!

Coolerator keeps you comfortable all year through, filters out dust, dirt and pollen, makes housework so much easier! Don't settle for less than the best—don't settle for less than Coolerator.

THE WORLD'S MOST EXCLUSIVE CLUBMEN

Its characters give the U.S. Senate variety and special flavor

Photographed by HANK WALKER, written by JAMES L. McCONAUGHY JR.

The United States Senate has often been called the world's most exclusive club. Its members are extremely jealous of their rules of seniority and procedure which have changed little in the last hundred years, they are quick to defend each other's rights and privileges and they like to go out of their way to compliment each other's abilities profusely, even in the face of wide party differences. Only a third of the Senate is elected every two years so that the club's membership is comparatively stable. Like any other club the Senate has its "characters"—those whose appearance and manners make them stand out even in a gathering overloaded with individuals. Some of these, like Kerr (opposite) and Dirksen (below), shine on the Senate floor itself. Others (there are 95 senators besides Joe McCarthy) come to flower behind the scenes, in the cloakrooms, private offices and committee hearings. It is these men, 11 of whom are shown on these pages, who help give the most exclusive club its color, its variety and its special flavor, along with a good deal of its vitality and stature.

THE ORATOR

In a group whose traditional stock in trade is old-fashioned oratory, Everett Dirksen of Illinois is the smoothest and slickest speaker of all. With broad sweeps of his arms and quick changes of pace he gives his Senate colleagues the full spell-binding treatment. He begins, "My friends, let us be reasonable," and then branches into an emotional oration which in turn leads his audience with alternate booms and whispers from the craggy coasts of rockbound Maine to the broad bosom of the proud Pacific. By the time he has finished, his shaggy gray hair is thoroughly rumpled and a number of his colleagues have gotten up and left. Though they are not all fans of Dirksen's histrionics, senators listen intently when Dirksen's voice is modulated to conversational timbre, for in private cloakroom sessions Dirksen is known as one of the Republican Party's craftiest negotiators.

THE NEEDLER

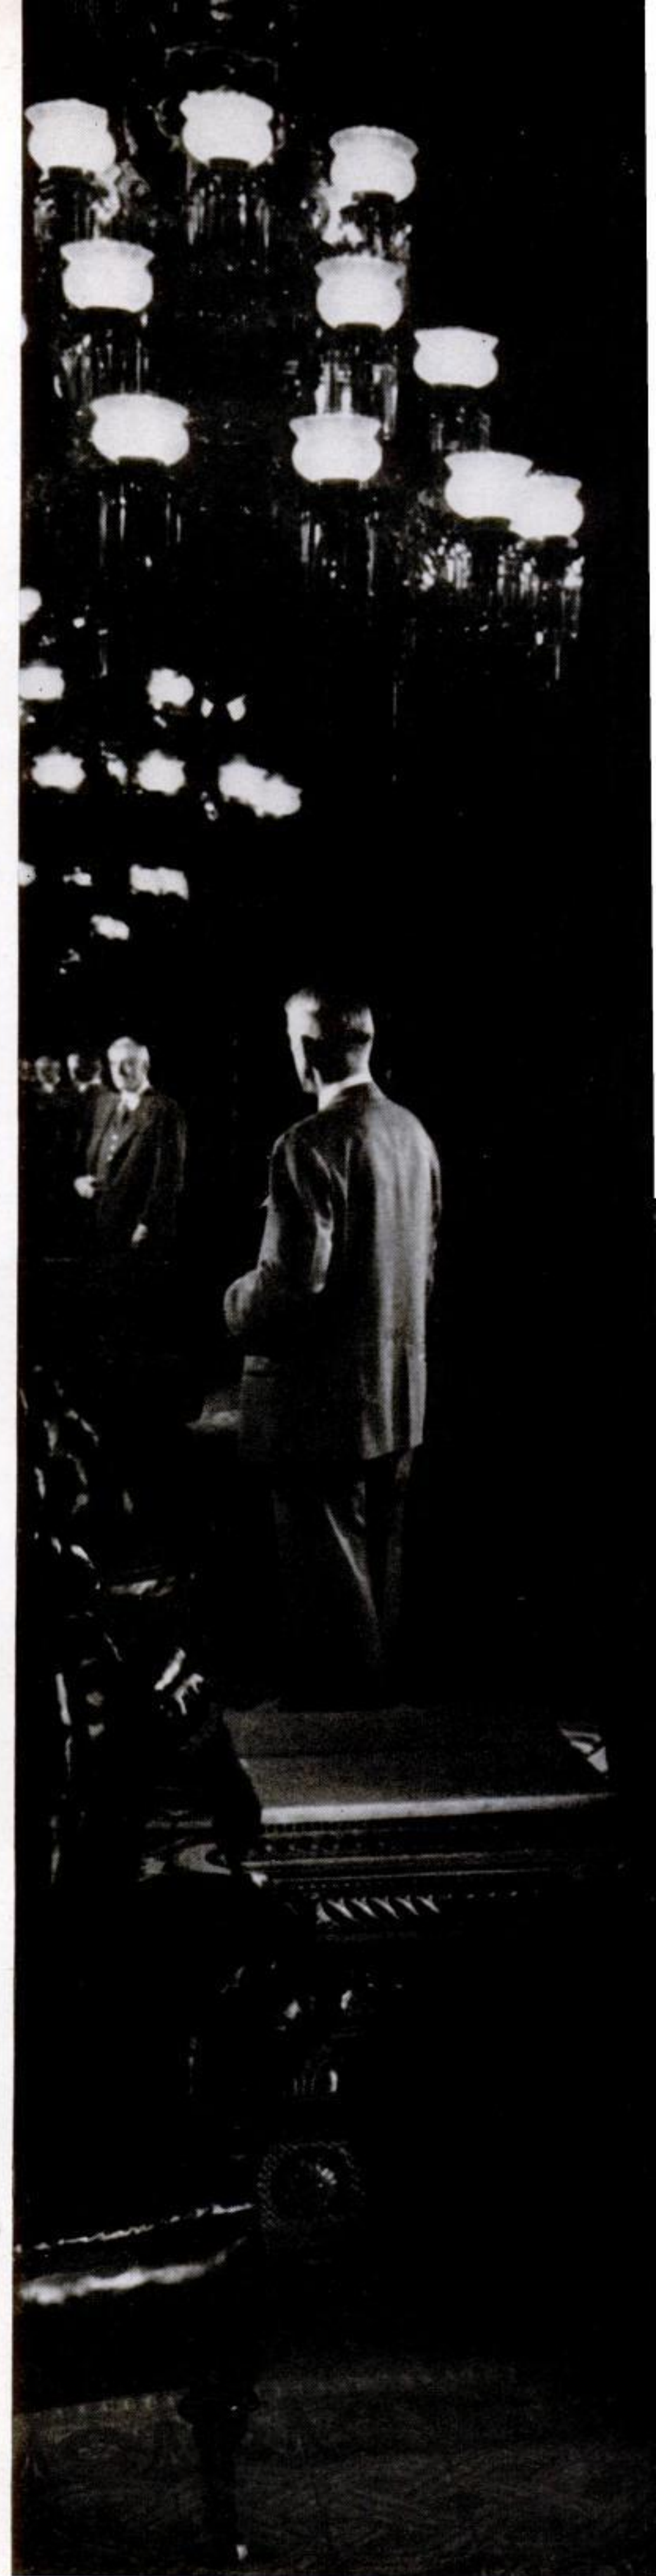

Oklahoma's Bob Kerr, a Democratic oil multimillionaire who teaches in Baptist Sunday school, loves nothing so much as a rip-roaring debate in which he can heckle the opposition. His favorite method is to wait until someone has been talking for a long time, then get up, stand with head cocked to one side (opposite) and let go at Republicans. "I have never seen men more suspicious of each other," he will say, "nor have I ever seen suspicion better founded." One of his commonest targets is the junior senator from Illinois, whom he has called "Irk some Dirksen." Most senators have become injured to his needling and have come to respect Kerr's courage. When Truman fired MacArthur, Bob Kerr was the first senator who rushed to defend the President right down the line, never budging though the arguing lasted for days.

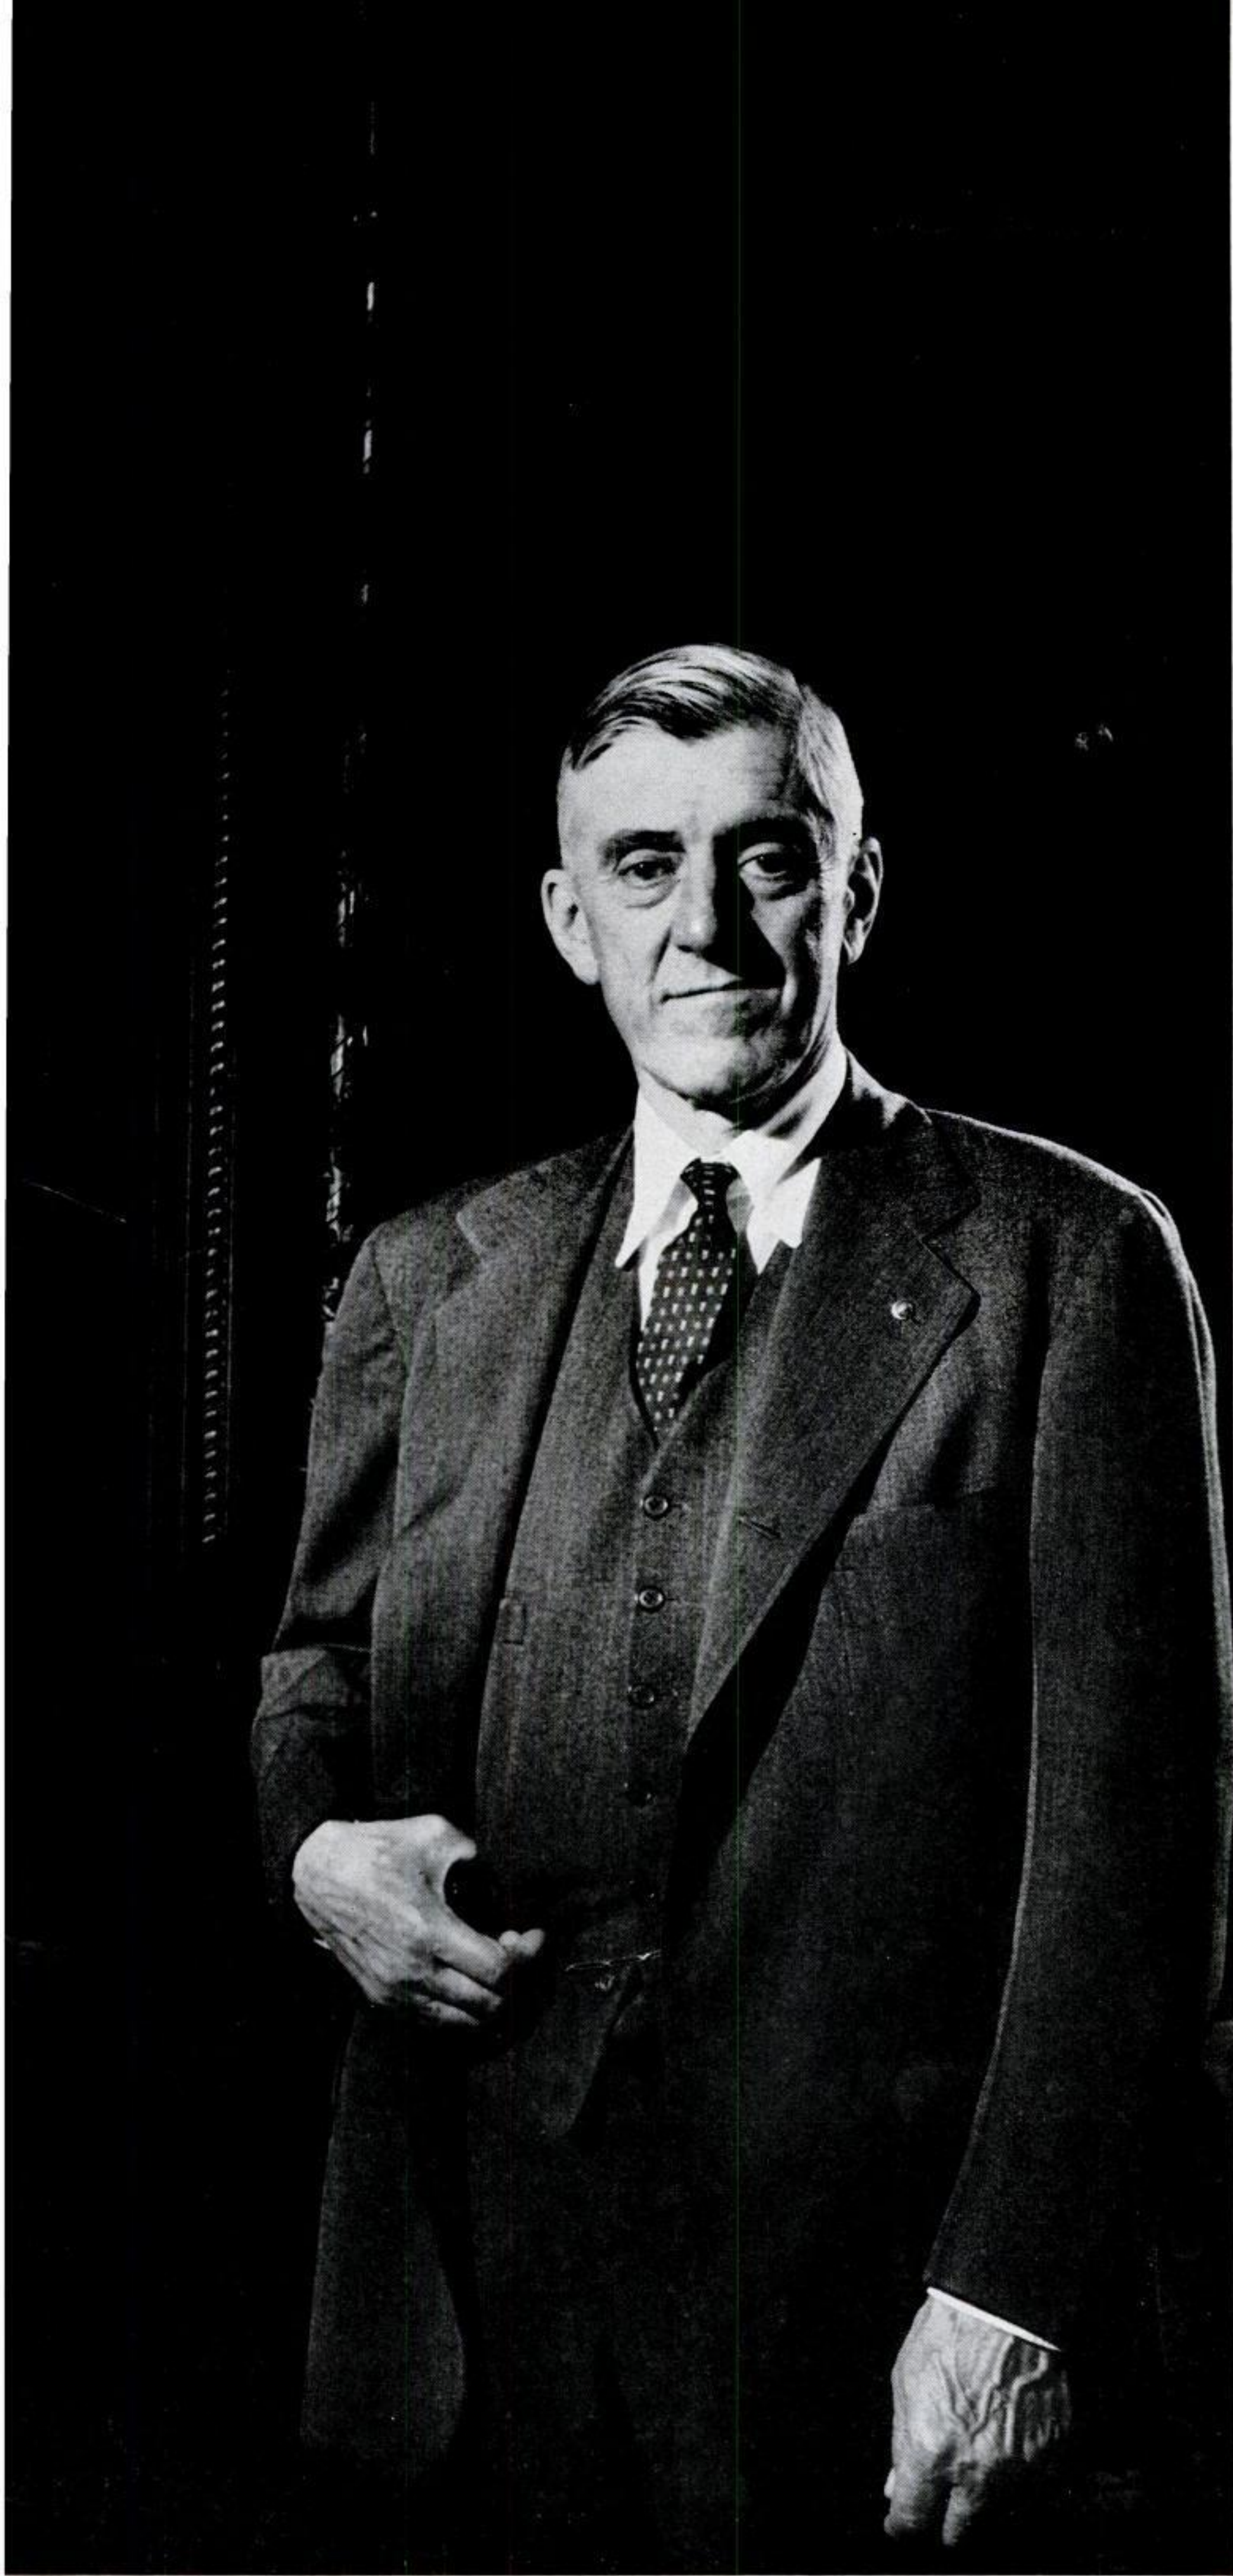

THE PATRIARCH

August and methodical, Walter George of Georgia walks slowly about the Senate as if he were the eldest among elders. He is in fact the acknowledged dean of the Senate's 22 Southern Democrats. He rarely speaks, but when he does his fellow members listen with respect to his organlike voice. When the Senate is considering matters on which he is an expert—taxes or foreign affairs—it usually adjourns at 5:30 p.m. because that is when Walter George likes to go home.

THE BLUEBLOOD

Leverett Saltonstall's ancestor, Sir Richard Saltonstall, landed in what is now Massachusetts in 1630, and today the senator's every mannerism suggests that his family has helped to run the state ever since—which it has. His broad-accented voice ringing out instantly betokens Beacon Hill and Plymouth Rock. Replying to almost any question—be it a debating point or a reporter's simple inquiry—Saltonstall will say, "In answer to your question I would say that . . ."

THE HUSTLER

Styles Bridges, New Hampshire Republican, moves at a dogtrot between his three public offices (one he occupies as Senate president pro tem, another as chairman of the Appropriations Committee, a third as senator) and one secret hideaway. Fond of behind-the-scenes maneuvering, he covers more ground and knows more about what is going on than any other member. Reporters have sometimes followed him all the way to New Hampshire just for a half-hour interview.

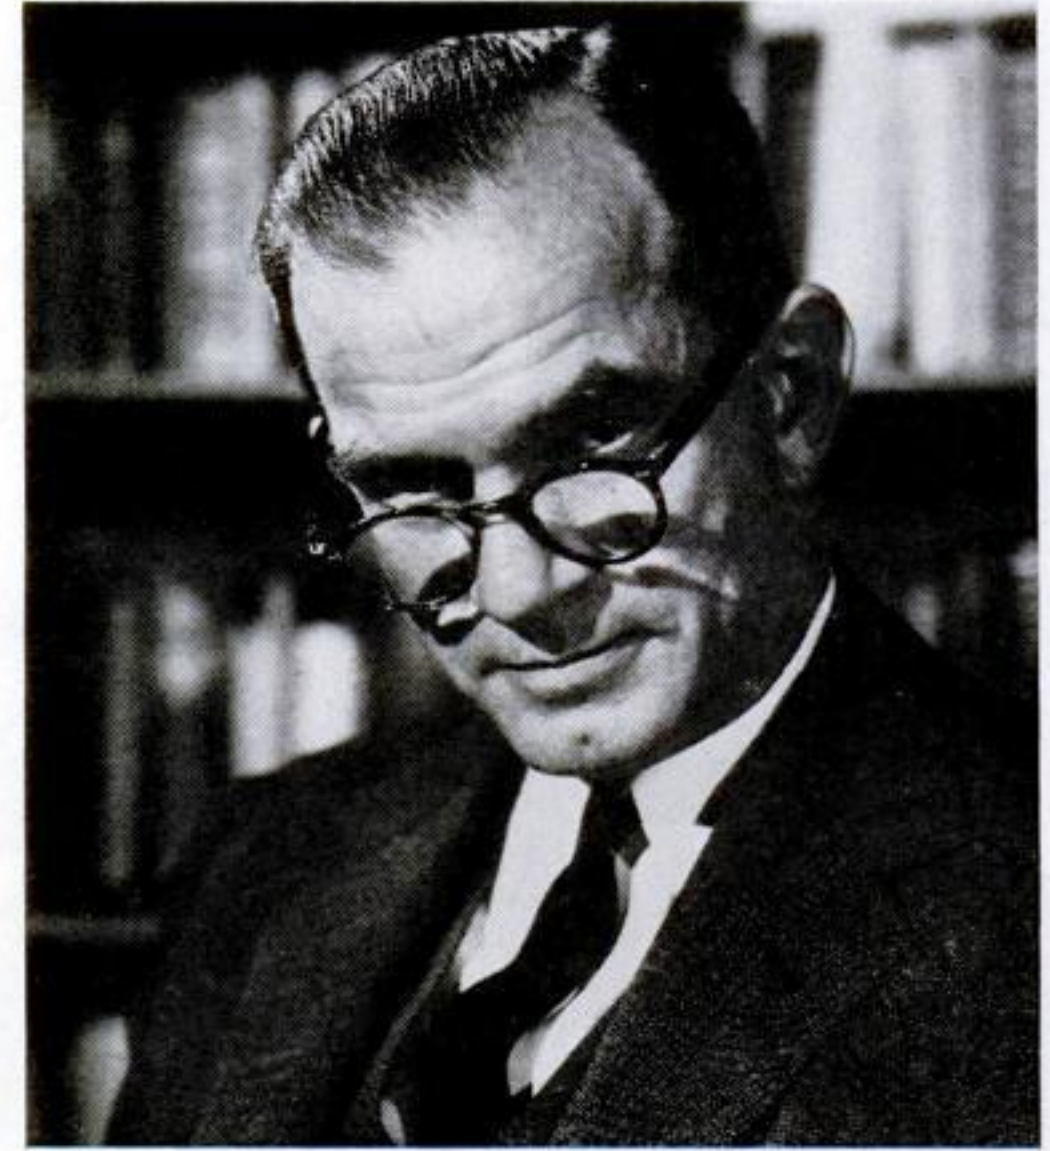

THE BRAIN

But for his health Eugene Millikin of Colorado would certainly have succeeded Taft as Republican leader. He is the Senate's financial expert. Southern Democrats admire him and often make him their Republican confidant. Unlike them, however, he is a witty floor speaker. He also has the Senate's keenest sense of ribald humor. Senator Taft once complained that he enjoyed Millikin's stories but could never repeat them to Mrs. Taft.

THE DUKE

Clyde Hoey of North Carolina, who has been in politics since 1898, has the most elegant clothes and manners in the Senate. He always wears a frock coat and is never without a carnation in his buttonhole. The wing collar surmounts a florid tie held by a stickpin. Cordial and courtly, Hoey likes to stroll about the Senate floor, stopping to shake hands every few feet and pronounce his good wishes. Old Washington hands call him "The Duke."

THE PROFESSOR

Although the Senate numbers several ex-professors (especially Douglas of Illinois, Smith of New Jersey), only Arkansas' Democrat William Fulbright, with his glasses pitched on the end of his nose and his didactic drawl, continues to look and sound like one. He is likely to sit in his office for hours on end just thinking. A former Rhodes scholar and teacher of law, Fulbright's questioning of witnesses resembles a Socratic dialog.

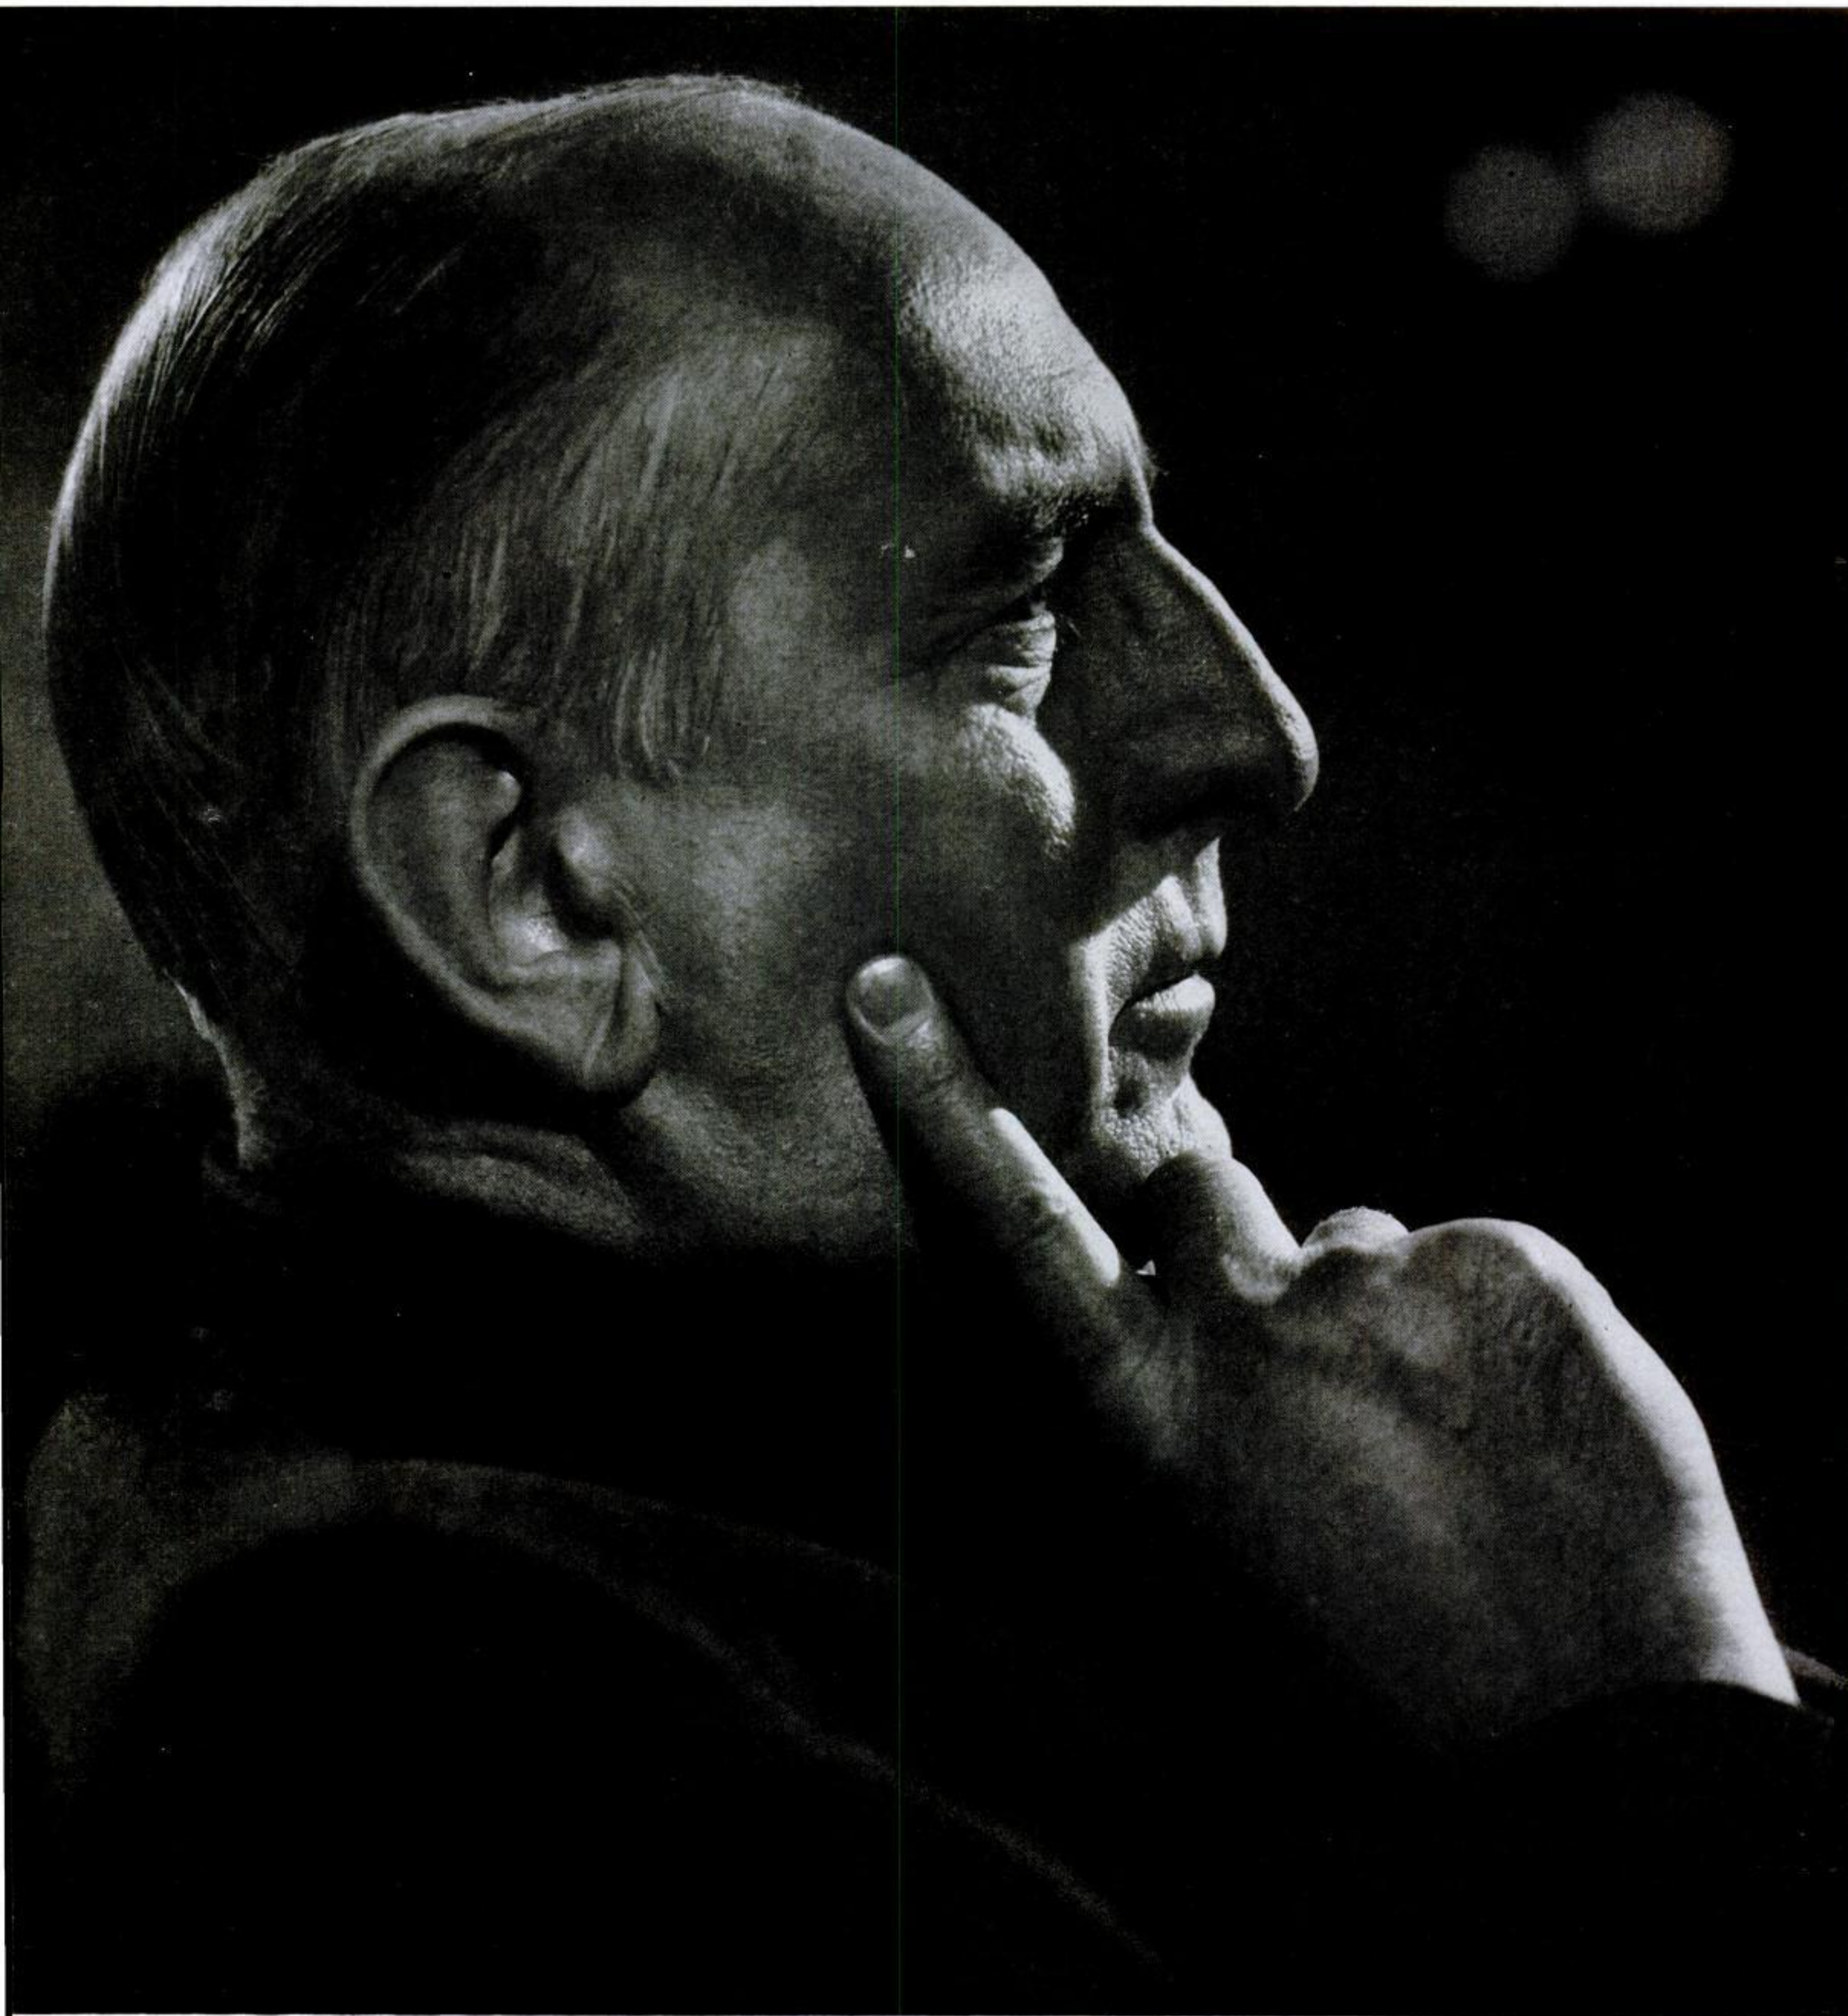

THE BOY

← John Kennedy of Massachusetts, an earnest campaigner for New England's economic needs, is also concerned with independence for Indochina. But despite his eight years in Congress he still looks like an undergraduate—even more so on weekends when he puts on old clothes and plays softball with his neighbors. He is called "Jack" even by clerks who have trouble remembering that he is 36 and has an honorary degree from Notre Dame.

THE JESTER

As the Administration's principal foreign policy spokesman in the Senate, Wisconsin's Alexander Wiley works hard, but he is always cracking jokes. He has posed for photographers banging a fellow senator over the head with a gavel, sometimes addresses government officials as "you handsome men," and once attended a hearing of John Foster Dulles wearing a comical black string tie. He once wrote a book, Laughing with Congress.

THE LISTENER

The calm, thoughtful look of Senator Richard Russell of Georgia as he listens to a witness belies one of the Senate's most agile minds. A skilled parliamentarian but a very shy man, Russell moves about the Senate floor, stopping every now and then to sample the argument or to hear how some other senator feels about a bill. In the rare instances when he does speak, everyone pays attention because it is likely that Russell will resolve the issue at hand. Reporters interviewing him find themselves doing all the talking, then getting from Russell in a sentence or two an answer which is complete, well thought out and authoritative.

Imagine Motor Oil that in Effect Adds Octanes to Gasoline— Boosts Gasoline Mileage Up to 23%!

The Best Lubricant for Any Car, New or Old—in Extreme Heat or Sub-Zero Cold—Adds Years to Engine Life!

NO LONGER can motor oil be judged solely on the basis of engine protection.

Today, there is documented proof that New Mobiloil Special actually boosts engine power—equivalent to raising gasoline performance as much as 5 octane numbers.

By raising efficiency and cutting waste, New Mobiloil Special will also increase gas mileage up to 23% and add years to the life of any engine.

After just 2 crankcase changes, this amazing new kind of motor oil has given engines—which “knocked” badly before—new-car pep and knock-free power.

In hundreds of cars, it reduced the octane requirement of every type of engine tested—which, in effect, is the same as adding octanes to the gasoline used.

Never before has a motor oil demonstrated so many protective properties.

- New Mobiloil Special cleaned up engines of all ages and kept them clean as no other oil ever has before.
- It corrected or relieved spark plug misfiring and pre-ignition “ping” (most common in late model cars).
- It reduced the rate of corrosive and mechanical wear to practically zero.

- It provided instant starts in sub-zero cold and complete protection at abnormally high temperatures.

This single oil is recommended for use in any climate, any season, in place of SAE 5W-10W-20W or 30 motor oil.

While New Mobiloil Special is priced higher than regular-quality motor oils, car owners will find that the extra power, extra performance and extra economy they get will more than pay back the small extra cost.

RUINED KAISER WILHELM CHURCH IS CITY'S BEST-KNOWN LANDMARK

A RUIN RETAINED

Berlin will restore a church but not its tower

Ever since Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church in the western sector of Berlin was blasted into ruins (above) by Allied bombs and shells in World War II, Berliners have argued over whether to restore the famous landmark, clear it away entirely or just let its shattered remains stand. They have now reached a compromise which seems to satisfy almost everyone. At a cost of $500,000, to be raised in part by donations, the sale of postcards and a public lottery, they plan to restore much of the church's original form (below) but leave the main bell tower in ruins as a memorial to war's destructive effects.

THE BOSS OF THE TEAMSTERS RIDES HIGH

BECK FIRST JOINED A UNION AT 20 WHEN HE DROVE THIS LAUNDRY TRUCK

Once called Goon No. 1, Dave Beck adds respectability to his power as head of world's biggest union

by ROBERT COUGHLAN

THERE is a new building going up in Washington, D.C. in a wonderful location. On the top will be a commodious penthouse. There is not a better view in Washington than the occupant of this penthouse will have; across the parklike lawns, a sweep of the Senate office building, the great dome of the Capitol and, on the other side, the old House office building—all the majesty of the U.S. government in a panorama of stirring symbolism. And the legislators in their turn, as they journey to and from their offices, will have a view of the new, white, handsome building and no doubt will look at it with admiration, although perhaps with speculation and, from time to time, even with a certain uneasy awe.

The new building will be the headquarters of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America, the biggest and one of the richest and most powerful labor unions in the world. The penthouse will be occupied by the offices of Dave Beck, the president of the union.

Now it is true, of course, that other big unions have established headquarters in Washington, but there is a feeling in labor and government that the Teamsters' move is an augury of Beck's future activities. And Beck's past and present activities have already been enough to worry many people in government, in management, but particularly in organized labor itself. In the year and a half since he became the Teamsters' president he has, for instance:

- ▶ Been the center of rumors that he was out to unseat George Meany and take over the presidency of the A. F. of L.;
- ▶ Been the center of other rumors—many of which seem to have been set afloat from the Teamsters' offices—that he would like to start a third labor confederation, with John L. Lewis and the miners and David McDonald and the steelworkers as his allies;
- ▶ Announced that he might organize a third political party, a labor party modeled somewhat on Britain's, unless labor legislation is remodeled to conform to his views;
- ▶ Rejected the "no-raiding" agreement which the A.F. of L. high command had designed to end jurisdictional quarrels among federation member unions and prevented the full implementation of a no-raiding agreement between the A.F. of L. and the C.I.O., thereby guaranteeing intra-union and intrafederation warfare for years to come;
- ▶ Allied himself with George Meany, his supposed enemy, to create a new dock union to take over longshoremen in New York and other places from the old, corrupt International Longshoremen's Association, thereby opposing his supposed ally, John L. Lewis, who has befriended the latter, and precipitating a wild and bloody jurisdictional strike on the New York waterfront;
- ▶ Suspended the leadership of several dozen Teamster locals on grounds of malfeasance and corruption, installing "trusteeships" under men answerable directly to him instead;
- ▶ Been restrained by a federal judge during this process for using "un-American methods";
- ▶ Fractured the C.I.O. United Brewery Workers Union and made off with 11 of its locals representing 10,000 members;
- ▶ Declared, "I don't give a damn what Reuther thinks! Who the hell is Walter Reuther to me?"

And so forth, until other labor leaders are jittery from wondering what Beck will say or do next.

A current and choice topic of speculation among them is Beck's intentions on the New York waterfront. His position there, officially, is as one among five trustees appointed by George Meany to supervise the new longshoremen's union until such time as it is well established and ready to elect its own officers. In fact, however, the apparatus for breaking the power of the old I.L.A. hinged on the role of the Teamsters: they recruited for the new union and ran cargo through the picket lines of the old union. Caught in a squeeze play between the Teamsters and the Seafarers Union (one of whose officers, Paul Hall, is another trustee), smothered by a federal court no-strike injunction and other legal attacks from the state and national governments, the I.L.A. lost its strike and may be on the edge of ruin.

All that Beck hopes to gain from the fracas, he has said, is jurisdiction over a few hundred men who load and unload cargo from trucks—and, of course, the satisfaction of ridding the waterfront of "graft, corruption, and racketeering." In the meantime, though, 2,500 lumberyard workers, formerly enrolled under the I.L.A., have been given a Teamsters charter. Other labor men take this as a symptom of a larger plan for gradual encroachment on waterfront jurisdictions. Some believe Beck may be aiming eventually to swallow the new longshoremen's union or, as a minimum objective, to make it subservient to him. This in turn would give him a club to use against certain Teamster locals in New York which have opposed him in the past and which are resisting his attempts to centralize union power in his own hands. To use the loyal Teamsters units against the old longshoremen's union, to use the new longshoremen's union against the disloyal Teamsters units—that seems to be the strategy. As for the master plan, Beck declares he has none. Others suspect that it is nothing less than integrated control of the New York waterfront.

He likes management

BECK has been equally disconcerting in his attitude toward management. It is an open scandal, affirmed by Beck himself in bull-like tones, that he likes management. He does not think that the employers of his 1.5 million members are trying to underpay and overwork them. He sees nothing intrinsically wrong, or at least unforgivable, in the fact that a man is an employer. He has even announced, "Some of my best friends are employers." Beck carries this humane attitude to extraordinary lengths:

When the Fruehauf Trailer Company, a firm that builds many of the truck trailers that Teamster members drive, found itself pressed for liquid capital last year, Beck and the Teamsters came to the rescue with a loan of $1.5 million at 4%.

In the trucking industry's vendetta with the railroads, it is not a management man but Beck himself who leads the protruck forces. As chairman of the Independent Advisory Committee to the Trucking Industry Inc., a lobbying and public relations front supported by both union and management, he recently informed Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield that the government could save $100 million a year by using trucks for short-haul mail transportation, and charged the railroads with wickedly "fighting to keep the mail on the rails, regardless of what it costs the consumer."

Beck thinks often of the consumer. And consumers would be well advised to think about Beck. By his estimation, "Trucking, as an industry, has now reached the status of being responsible for about one job in every seven in the country. Nine million four hundred thousand people are employed in the motor transport industries. Fifty thousand communities are dependent on truck transportation." Actually this is a modest appraisal of his real power. Beck, by his control of the Teamsters union, conceivably could bring the nation's trade to a halt almost overnight. Not that he is ever likely to do so: "I may not be the smartest fella in the world," he often says, "but my mother didn't raise any crazy children." The hypothetical power is there, however, like the President's power to order the hydrogen bomb dropped, and is something awesome to contemplate.

Who is Dave Beck?

He is a bald, pink-faced, heavily muscled, 200-pound former laundry truck driver, now 59 years old, happily married, father of a grown son. His full name is David Daniel Beck. He owns, among other properties, a substantial brick house in a fashionable section of Seattle, where he lives (when he can get away from Washington) sedately and with no vices or even any particular diversions: he neither drinks nor smokes, although he does swear. He is a past Honorary Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler of the northwest district of the Elks. He is also an Eagle, a former officer of the American Legion and a former president of the board of regents of the University of Washington. On a vote, he probably would be named Seattle's most distinguished citizen.

Obviously Beck fits no previous pattern, considered from any point of view. He no more resembles the old craft-union leadership typified by such dinosaurs as Harry Bates of the Bricklayers Union than he does the new, politically minded, intellectually sophisticated leaders such as Walter Reuther. In a good many ways, however, his career, his motivations, his methods and his outlook on life are reminiscent of a breed that once roamed freely in his part of the country—the empire builders like Stanford, Hill and Weyerhaeuser, who, as much for the fun as for the money, rose by hook and by crook to summits of personal power.

Lemuel Beck, his father, a native of Tennessee, came out to California as a young man. He had no special trade but became an auctioneer in and around San Francisco, where he met and married Mary Tierney. They settled for a while in Stockton, and there David was born on June 16, 1894, to be followed 16 months later by the only other child, a girl, whom they named Rita and who now works on the switchboard at the Teamsters Joint Council Building in Seattle. When Dave was 4 the family moved to Seattle, where Lemuel Beck went into the carpet business. He was a hard worker, a robust, aggressive man who stood 5 feet 10 and weighed about 240 pounds. Dave, looking back, believes that he resembles his father in nearly every way, even to an identical baldness. The exception was business judgment. "We were always poor—we were very, very poor. If it hadn't been for my mother handling what money there was, we would have starved."

Mary Beck went to work in a laundry to help make ends meet, and Dave remembers sitting outside on the steps with his sister until late at night waiting for her to finish. Dave peddled newspapers, caught fish and sold them, and sold trees at Christmas time; sometimes, he remembers, he and his father would fish in nearby Lake Union for something to eat that day. Dave was a good boy and an earnest one. "I never smoked, never played a game of pool, and I never drank. I don't know why, I just didn't. Instead I used to go off alone and read. For some reason I always had a great love to read." At the end of his third year in high school he left to work in a laundry, on an inside job at first and a few years later as a truck driver. From that event, much was to follow.

Unionism was much in the air in Seattle in those days. The Teamsters, badly organized but ambitious even then, went out on strike in 1913. They lost but soon recovered their momentum and set out to organize, among others, the laundry workers. Beck needed no persuasion: the split hours, poor pay and bad conditions under which his mother had worked for so many years and which he now experienced made him a charter member of the new laundry local. In 1917 the laundry workers struck, and won. Beck had been active in the strike and was elated by the victory. When the great Mike Casey, West Coast representative of the Teamsters International, came up from San Francisco to present the local with its charter, Beck was moved to make a speech. Casey listened and commented, more prophetically than he could have known, "Who is that redheaded fellow? He's a fine speaker. That's a fellow who's going places."

After a hiatus during the war, when Beck served in the Navy, he returned to his laundry route and before long was making $100 a week. With equal energy he applied himself to self-improvement: he enrolled for extension courses at the University of Washington, eventually finishing law, commercial law, economics, business administration, history and English. He read books, mostly the autobiographies of successful men. He became a classy rhetorician, his conversation studded with polysyllabic words and dignified redundancies. He was planning to go into business for himself. But he remained an ardent union man and took a leading part in the laundry workers' affairs. One oldtimer says, "I can't remember the time when Dave Beck wasn't making a speech. He used to hammer away on just one subject, 'Organize.'" By 1923 he had been elected president of the Teamsters Joint Council, an association of all the locals in the state. The next year he was elected secretary-treasurer of his own local. The following year, when the Teamsters held their international convention in Seattle, Beck was put in charge of the arrangements. Thus he met Dan Tobin, Teamsters' general president.

Offer from the other side

CLEARLY, Beck was a man on the rise: Tobin was not the only one to see that. Lewis Schwellenbach and Robert Macfarlane (the first would eventually become Secretary of Labor, the other president of the Northern Pacific Railway) were law partners in Seattle then, with some big laundries among their clients, and they were on the verge of merging several laundries into a chain. They offered Beck the job as general manager of the new combine. He was flattered and greatly tempted. He was married by then (to Dorothy Leschander, daughter of a former whaleman and Klondike prospector who had settled down as superintendent of a Seattle office building) and had become a father. He wanted money and needed security, but he wanted to stay with the union. He took his dilemma to Mike Casey, who in turn took it up with Dan Tobin, who offered him a job as part-time general organizer for the International. Beck accepted, and a few months later became a full-time organizer in charge of the whole Pacific Northwest and British Columbia.

This was in 1926. Relations between workers and employers were raw and sensitive in Seattle and throughout the Northwest. Only a few years earlier Seattle had had a general strike—the first general strike in U.S. history. The International Workers of the World, the "Wobblies," during the preceding years had invaded the lumber camps and sawmills with their radical doctrines and "activist" tactics, setting off pitched battles with plug-uglies hired by the employers.

In this atmosphere of political militancy, Beck was an anomaly. He considered the Wobblies demented. He had no strong political feelings one way or the other, but he believed in the capitalist system, and his objective was simply to get more of its fruits for his members. It was clear to him that the best way to go about this was to organize everyone and everything in sight and so be able to bargain collectively with the employers, who were not bad men but who, quite naturally, were not going to pay any more than they had to. Beck would have thought them as crazy as the Wobblies if they did.

If Beck found anything to dislike about the free enterprise system, it was its untidiness. Competition made the price structure erratic, which in turn tended to make the wage structure erratic, frequently to the harm of Teamster members. In 1927, reflecting YOUNG DAVE showed determination and ruggedness at 8 years.

Beck's disapproval of this condition, the laundry drivers' local signed a contract with the Laundry Association providing that the drivers' commissions be based on a uniform price list. The laundries were free to charge any amount they wanted to for their service, or as Beck said, to "give it away" if they wanted to, but the drivers would collect a standard fee. Beck has commented, "Wages are 42% of the total cost of operation in laundries. This demand of the union went a long way toward setting up a fair competitive structure in the laundries. Thus the laundry business came to a stabilized condition." To some people the arrangement looked like price fixing or even cartelization, but the courts decided it was not. Beck went on to "stabilize" a number of other industries during the following years.

Despite his pristine intentions, Beck found himself progressively more and more distrusted by employers and public during his first decade of organizing work. He soon managed to organize the "over-the-road" drivers, the men who drove the big trucks up and down the coast, into a Highway Drivers Council. Employers guessed uneasily (and correctly) that he was preparing a weapon to whip them all into line on pain of having their freight deliveries cut off. There were many instances of violence as his subordinates went about their work—mysterious accidents on the premises of "unfair" employers, a cut-rate dry cleaning establishment blown up, trucks upset, taxicabs rammed by cars equipped with steel-rail bumpers. Beck was piously averse to such methods and blamed them on the hotheaded nature of some of the members. But too, as he would later say, "Those were the days when employers were using every dirty method they could think of. Naturally, if they wanted to fight that way, labor had to fight back."

The nadir of Beck's prestige came in 1936 when the Newspaper Guild at the Seattle Post-Intelligencer went out on strike and he dispatched a troop of heavy-handed truck drivers to join the picket line. They roughed up nonstriking employees and closed the paper tight. William Randolph Hearst, the owner, put his editorial writers on the air with violent denunciations, and the rival Seattle Times wrote indignantly, "How do you like the look of Dave Beck's gun? The shame of it!" Beck sued both papers and four radio stations for a total of $800,000 for libel and defamation of character and settled out of court for $25,000.

From public goon No. 1, as many people in Seattle were disposed to regard him, Beck miraculously within a few years transformed himself into something nearer public benefactor No. 1. In this he was greatly aided by Harry Bridges, pro-Communist head of the West Coast longshoremen. Bridges swung his union into the newly formed C.I.O. and in 1937 began his "inland march" designed to add warehousemen and eventually, presumably, other categories of workers to his domain. (Beck would comment later, "I was not cognizant of his intentions, but I knew goddam well what he was up to.") It was a direct challenge to the power of Beck and the Teamsters. The result was a limited but bloody civil

WITHOUT THIS VITAL MOISTURE HUMAN HAIR CAN "DIE" OF THIRST!

Vital moisture and oils often evaporate faster than the hair can replace them. Improper drying, waving, dyeing and shampooing practices also can dehydrate your hair dangerously.

Amazing before-and-after tests prove to Dermatologists that Charles Antell Formula 9, by Helping Replace Moisture, Revives "Life," Manageability, Lustre, Curl-Tendency; makes Dry, Dehydrated, Drab Hair Look Lovelier, Overnight.

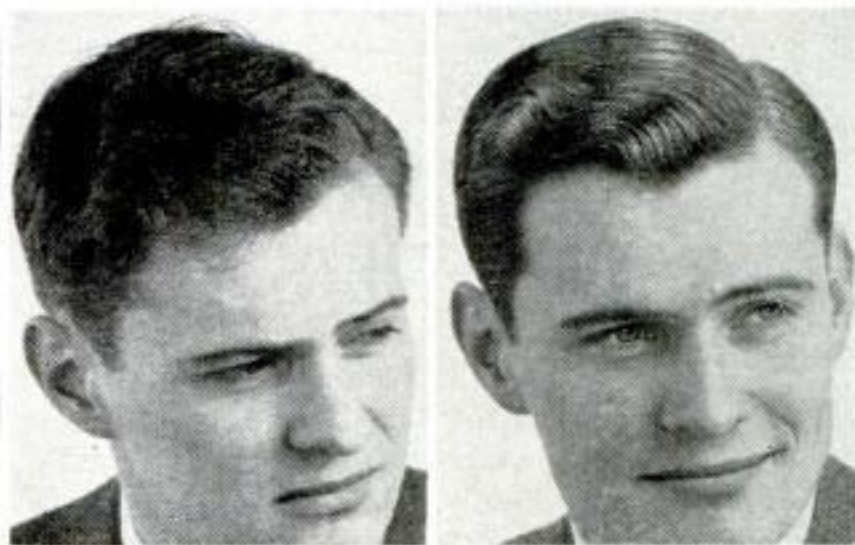

• HUMAN HAIR, of either sex, owes its healthy, handsome appearance, its "life," strength and manageability to the fact that, under ideal conditions, it contains and retains as much as 80% moisture that, normally, is "married" to the hair by the scalp's natural oils.

Because this moisture can evaporate; because without moisture human hair can "die" of thirst, Charles Antell created Formula 9, with its concentrated, super-refined, anhydrous lanolin. For super-refined, anhydrous lanolin not only contains the same beneficial moisture-loving substances natural oils contain, but so much so that it absorbs or retains up to 80% of its own weight in moisture.

Before-and-After tests now prove to dermatologists that this super-refined, anhydrous lanolin in Formula 9 is thirstily absorbed by the dehydrated outer layers of hair and scalp; that it helps rectify lost oil-and-moisture balance, to make drab, dry, dehydrated hair look healthier, handsomer, more manageable overnight.

When you shampoo your hair, use Charles Antell Lanolin Shampoo, also. It, too, is made with super-refined lanolin, to cleanse without dehydrating. Formula 9, Cream or Liquid, from 59¢. BATTLE OF THE WAISTLINE is perpetual with Beck. In 1938, appalled at weighing 214 pounds, he put on a big campaign of dieting, road work near war. The longshoremen's favorite weapon was the cargo hook, the Teamsters favored sawed-off baseball bats and their seamen allies (under the A.F. of L. Sailors' Union led by Harry Lundeberg, who hated Bridges) often used window-sash chain wound around their fists. Beck and his men won the war and in the process earned the gratitude of inland employers who, little as they liked him and his union, feared Bridges much more.

One employer and trade association after another tumbled into the Teamsters' commodious and only too receptive arms. The C.I.O. had designs on the retail clerks. Quickly the clerks found themselves urged by their bosses to join a new union set up by Beck with headquarters housed in the Teamsters' building. Bridges had made a speech at the University of Washington predicting the end of the employer class. Beck rejoined in a speech: "I do not subscribe in the slightest degree to the claim that there is no place in the economic and social life of our country for employers." Later: "Yes, we work with industry. We positively admit it. But no man alive can say he paid Dave Beck 5¢ for the conduct or regulation of his business." "No man can say there is a single Communist in our group. If any Communist sticks his head up we'll throw him out."

Moreover, as the businessmen learned, Beck kept his contracts. To Beck's enemies they were "sweetheart contracts"—sellouts to the bosses. To the bosses themselves they usually seemed far from that. But good or bad, for Beck they had the sanctity of law, and he stood ready to mangle any local that tried to wriggle out of their terms. As he summed up his point of view only recently, "You put your name to that contract and I don't give a good goddam how bad it turns out to be, you live up to it. Because your word is the most valuable thing you have got."

The year of the Bridges war, 1937, was in another way too a crucial and rewarding year in Beck's career. For a long time he had fretted over the condition of southern California and especially Los Angeles, traditionally an "open shop" town. But it was out of his jurisdiction. In 1937 he became chief organizer for the West Coast and promptly moved into action with an invention of his: "the most brilliant organizing device ever created," as it has been called. This was the Western Conference of Teamsters.

Until that time the individual locals of the union had almost complete autonomy. There was only haphazard cooperation among them and little interchange of ideas or information. In earlier times this lack of system had been feasible enough, for communities were rather self-contained. But with the growth of intercity and interregional commerce, Beck saw that union organization would have to adapt itself to the changed pattern of the economy. The C.I.O.'s "vertical unionism" (erasing craft lines to encompass all workers in a factory and all factories in an industry) was one answer. Beck's was to throw the Teamsters' whole 11-state area into one huge, centrally controlled combine. Moreover, in what was referred to as "protecting the flanks," the Teamsters would organize not only "everything on wheels" but peripheral and supporting fields such as filling station operators, parking field attendants, et al.

Beck took Los Angeles like Grant took Richmond—by encirclement and blockade. Truck drivers there could join the union or not. But: if trucking companies tried to deliver goods to other cities, Beck pointed out, the Teamsters and their affiliates in the University of Washington's stadium, working out with rowing machine on his lawn and got his weight down to 169½ (right). Today he is back up to 200.

these places could not be expected to handle this "hot cargo" at the other end. Nor could Los Angeles merchants expect to receive goods from outside except by union drivers, who of course could not be expected to deliver to nonunion establishments. That was that. The Teamsters had some 800 members in Los Angeles in 1937. Today they have 100,000.

Beck used the same technique—fortified, his opposition declares, by flying squads of goons—to break the back of the brewery workers' union in the Northwest. The jurisdictional quarrel had been an old one, and the rights and wrongs of the matter are too tangled and debatable to go into here. The result, in any case, was that Beck vowed that the brewery workers, "inside" workers as well as truck drivers, must belong to the Teamsters. To make his point he embargoed all beer except that made by breweries which signed up with him. The fight went on for many months, at the end of which Beck inevitably won. All West Coast beer is drunk today under his auspices.

Other strange companions soon found themselves "protecting the flanks" of the Teamsters: cannery workers, aircraft mechanics, automobile salesmen, cowpunchers, rag sorters, even optical technicians. Beck, although without the political motive of the I.W.O., seemed to be heading in the direction of "one big union." At the same time he felt competent to judge the merits of the case when other unions put on organizing strikes. Often he disapproved. On his orders Teamster members went through picket lines many times. He is credited with "breaking" the Oakland general strike of 1946 and the big machinists' strike at the Boeing plant in Seattle, among others. He demanded and severely enforced intra-union solidarity, but he had no interest in "labor solidarity."

The new respectability

WHATEVER the merits or drawbacks of his methods, they brought labor peace to Seattle and eventually to the whole West Coast. For that, many people, not only employers but average citizens and many union members, were thankful. Beck rapidly became a respected leading citizen of Seattle, a process that was encouraged by his tireless leadership in worthy projects of all kinds: war loan drives, gifts of athletic equipment to soldiers, blood donations, fund raising for the Episcopal Church and the Associated Boys Club. He sat on the state parole board, the Seattle Civil Service Commission and the board of regents of the university, becoming president of the board in his final year. By the end of 1946 even the Seattle Times could say, "Many are wishing that there could be more Dave Becks in the national labor picture."

Successful, famous, beloved (with some dissents), the picture needed only one element to make it complete, and Beck had not neglected that either. He was rich. The Times and others, it will be recalled, had settled $25,000 on him as a result of his libel suit of 1936. With this as a nest egg, bolstered by his increasingly comfortable salary (which today is $50,000 a year) and by his ability to borrow, Beck began investing in real estate. His judgment was invariably excellent; today, according to a newspaper article which Teamsters headquarters has distributed, he is a millionaire—although Beck himself vigorously denies it. The Wall Street Journal, in an article on "Businessman Beck" not long ago, reported that he is chairman of Northwest Securities Corp. Inc., an auto finance company with gross business of more than $2 million a year, and the Kellerblock Corp., which built and owns an 18-story Seattle apartment building called Grosvenor House. He is also the proprietor of the B & B Investment Co. "which gathers income created by other Beck enterprises" such as the LBG Realty Co. and the DB Investment Corp. Beck also owns a filling station and a parking lot, both near the Teamsters' building, and controls numerous other real estate parcels around the city.

Beck sees nothing at all extraordinary in his business activities. "What the hell," he commented recently, "if I believed in free enterprise, isn't it natural that I should try to use it for my own financial advantage?" Beck believes that other labor leaders should go into business too: "They'd learn you can't take everything out of the bucket and leave nothing for the employer to live on."

Beck began to give his union the benefit of his foresight in business matters immediately after becoming president in 1952 when Tobin retired. "Dave didn't wait for the body to get cold," a Teamster official remembers. Most of the $30 million treasury was invested in government bonds and some $9 million was actually lying in banks in savings and checking accounts. Beck hired an investment counselor and set about getting the union a higher return on its money.

Since the union constitution forbids buying common stocks or other investments of a speculative nature, there were some legal questions to be resolved; there still are some. But interest from the Teamsters' portfolio already is $500,000 higher than before.

PREDECESSOR Tobin bestows pat as Beck takes over.

Also, during Beck's tenure, union assets have increased by $5 million.

Through the Western Conference, Beck had organized his center and his flanks so firmly that 30% of Teamsters' whole membership was accounted for by his 11 western states, which contain only 10% of the nation's population. Projecting these statistics on the national scene, he concluded that if the rest of the country were as well organized as the West, the Teamsters would more than double their membership, from 1¼ million (in 1952) to about 3 million. This became the official goal, with the expectation that it could be realized by 1960. To that end he set about duplicating the Western Conference intact.

Already the Central States Conference is a going concern, an Eastern Conference was formed last fall and a Southern Conference is currently being organized. At international headquarters Beck has created a general staff to guide his regional commanders, including an economic research section, a legal department (at the last international meeting in Miami there were 22 lawyers in attendance), and the various ancillary services common to a big enterprise. "I run the union like a corporation," Beck says. "We deal in one commodity—labor".

At headquarters, too, will be the 15 trade division heads, each supervising a particular segment of the empire, such as the bakery, dairy, building and contractors division. A "National Miscellaneous Division," which makes John L. Lewis' famous catchall "District 50" seem an exclusive craft union by comparison, tends such inclusively named strays as the "Airplane Parts, Supplies, Accessories, Auto Transport, Towing, Parts, Service, Supply, Motor and Vehicle Sales and Demonstrators, Dismantlers and Helpers of Chicago and Vicinity Teamsters Union."

So far a good deal of this massive reorganization is in the planning stage. How far Beck succeeds or fails in getting it off paper and into actuality will continue to fascinate labor circles. As one of Beck's lieutenants has explained, "It's always been a free enterprise union. A guy got a local charter, he was in business. There was sort of a no-raiding agreement between Tobin and the local leaders. Now they see Beck moving in on them, centralizing, taking their authority away from them, and they don't like it. He can't move too fast or he'd get a revolution on his hands."

Already Beck has added some 250,000 members to the Teamsters, a substantial part of them simply by swallowing up locals from other unions. Naturally this has caused some hard feelings. The state C.I.O. in Minnesota, outraged at the loss of the Minneapolis-Honeywell union, published a muckraking series under the title "Dave Beck... Strike Breaker and Traitor to Trade Unionism." Such slurs, Beck feels, are the price of progress. He has said that the Teamsters are "100% opposed to raiding"; but they do insist on what is rightfully theirs. Beck declares that 50,000 members who properly come under the Teamsters' jurisdiction are now held in thrall by other unions, whereas "very, very few" of his members belong elsewhere. For this reason he rejected the

A.F. of L.-C.I.O. no-raiding pact as a "Korean peace that covers up problems but does not solve them" since it would freeze these "violations."

The way to get real labor peace, he proposed, was for the offending unions—by the Teamsters' reckoning they include most of the big unions in both labor groups—to negotiate on a private, individual basis for exchange of prisoners and subsequent no-raiding agreements. Although the general opinion was that the Teamsters' refusal wrecked any immediate chances of the long-discussed merger between A.F. of L. and C.I.O. and is guaranteed on the contrary to keep labor in a turmoil of jurisdictional quarrels, Beck does not agree. He has said, "Our position is very definitely a contribution toward unity. We are going to move heaven and earth to effectuate working arrangements with other unions."

There are those who feel that Beck could more profitably spend some time cleaning his newly enlarged house. They point to some of the testimony before grand juries and congressional investigating committees during the past months. In St. Louis a federal grand jury investigating the Labor Health Institute, a Teamster medical service headed by Harold J. Gibbons, was so disturbed by preliminary findings that it demanded the books of St. Louis Local 688. Gibbons at first refused and went to jail for contempt of court. Information has been presented to the grand jury concerning another Teamster official, Orville Ring of Kansas City, charging him with embezzlement of funds, obtaining money by false pretenses, felonious assault and second-degree robbery. A few weeks ago he resigned his union office. In Minneapolis, Eugene Williams, administrator of Teamster Local 544's pension funds, bought himself a bar and grill with money lent by the fund and also, it appears, borrowed from funds left in the office safe.

In Detroit, William E. Bufalino, president of the service, drivers, and helpers division, Local No. 985, is accused of setting up a "gigantic, wicked conspiracy" (as a congressional report calls it) to convert the city's coin-operated machine industry into a racket under his dominance. The report further comments that James R. Hoffa, head of the Central States Conference of the Teamsters, "has been described as the 'brains' between this shakedown and power grab by Bufalino and his Teamsters Local No. 985. . . . In his testimony, Hoffa was contemptuous in that in three instances he refused to answer questions propounded by the committee," the report goes on. "Immediate steps must be taken to avert this trend of extortion, gangsterism, and dictatorship by a few selfish and power-lustful racketeers who are operating under the guise of being labor leaders."

Trouble with the Brewery Workers

BECK, who has said, "I have explicit confidence in Jimmy Hoffa," has taken no action in any of these instances, but is "investigating" in Detroit and elsewhere and has plans, he says, to set up central supervision of all local welfare funds. "Our union should be as clean as it's humanly possible to make it," he has said, "but I do not assume that I have the authority or the right on mere rumor to take away from individuals their judicial processes. . . . I will remove any individual if it's justified and by the same line of reasoning I will not remove him until my conscience dictates to me that he should be removed."

The dictates of Beck's conscience will be watched with interest in the case also of certain recent recruits to the Teamsters. Last year, with the revival of the old Teamsters-Brewery Workers war, 11 brewery locals in the east seceded from their parent body and joined the Teamsters, led there by Willie Greenstein, the secretary-treasurer of the Brewery Workers Joint Board of Greater New York, Charles Klare, office secretary of the Joint Board and editor of its official publication, and I. Philip Sipser, general counsel of the Joint Board. On July 20, 1953, subsequent to the transfer, all three men were called to testify before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. They were asked whether they were or had been members of the Communist party. All three declined to answer, invoking the protection of the Fifth Amendment.

When asked about this recently, Beck explained that the brewery locals had "volunteered" to join the Teamsters who, in their friendly fashion, had felt compelled to welcome them. As for Klare and Greenstein: "I don't know this Klare. Who is he? I only met Greenstein once some while ago. Right now I wouldn't know Willie Greenstein from a bale of hay. All I know is that we took over those locals. If anybody can show me an affidavit that Greenstein is a Communist, and prove it, I'll throw him out." As for Sipser, he is not a member of the union, Beck points out, and is thus not subject to Teamster discipline. And: "What's the Bar Association doing about him? Why don't they disbar him? Why judge a labor organization by one set of rules and the Bar Association by another? I'll guarantee one thing—Beck will move a hell of a lot faster than the Bar Association will ever do." Also, Beck believes, using the Fifth Amendment is not "basic proof" of Communism. But he is, he says, continuing to investigate the situation.

To those who dislike Beck these equivocations are evidence of an ability, as one C.I.O. official has said, to "accommodate himself to anything that will increase his membership." To Beck's defenders they appear as tactical maneuvers—feints, deceptions, expedient temporary retreats—which should not be confused with the higher and always pure aims of his grand strategy. An aide has said, "It's a matter of how fast can you go? How many enemies can you afford to make at a time?"

The exact nature, the final shape, of that strategy puzzles and fascinates friends and enemies alike. What does he want? As for the recurrent rumor that he aims to unhorse George Meany as president of the A.F. of L., his answer—when the question was put to him on a Meet the Press broadcast—was direct enough: "If you were to offer me the presidency of the American Federation of Labor tomorrow at five times its salary, I would not accept it under any condition. During my lifetime I will never accept it even if it were offered." Nor does he, his close friends believe, have any personal—at least any specific—ambitions in national politics. His aim would seem to be rather to bend national politics to the ends of labor, in particular to the ends of the Teamsters, yet not to the ultimate harm, as he would define it, of his friends the employers. Perhaps he sees himself in the role of his favorite historical character, Abraham Lincoln; not as president but as a statesman who, while bringing freedom to the working man, will also bind up the wounds of labor-management war and reconcile both sides in an enduring peace. Or else.

The current battle on the New York waterfront with the International Longshoremen's Union is only a major skirmish to Beck. In the middle of it he had left New York and flown to Seattle, then at the end of March had gone on to Los Angeles, to San Francisco, again to Seattle and last week back to Washington. The schedule is not unusual: he averages 15,000 miles a month. From a laundry route in Seattle his route has become the whole U.S., and he works it with the same diligence and drive.

Then he wanted money. Now, whatever else he may want, he wants power. Why? The question was put to an old friend, who said, "Why do cats like catnip? They just like it, that's all. To Dave power is something desirable in itself. He couldn't do without it. It's part of him—so much so he doesn't even think about it. He naturally wants it and gets it." In a nation on wheels, to control "everything on wheels" is a summit of power.

PERIPATETIC BECKS nap aboard chartered plane. Mrs. Beck manages to keep up with him on most of the major trips. Their only child is grown—son Dave Jr. who is part owner of a beer-distributing concern in Seattle.

The Best-dressed Woman in Brazil

SHE HAS GOOD CLOTHES AND A LIFE TO MATCH

The serenely beautiful woman shown on the opposite page engulfed by tropical leaves is Senhora The-reza Leite de Souza Campos, 26, of Rio de Janeiro, who is really sitting pretty. Wife of a wealthy banker and polo player, Senhora de Souza Campos travels to Europe every year, has a striking house and a hand-some young son. Her friends include Aly Khan, for whom she and her husband recently gave a dinner party for 70, and Bing Crosby, with whom she re-fused to make a movie. Possessed of a huge wardrobe and unerring taste, she brilliantly adorns this idyllic existence and is conceded to be the best-dressed woman in Brazil. Her wardrobe has suits and evening clothes from Paris, an occasional self-designed out-fit, and a generous helping of Italian play clothes. In a season she buys some 10 evening dresses, dis-cards them after six or eight wearings. During Janu-ary and February, summer in Brazil, she moves to the mountains outside Rio where she can shed her formal city clothes and live in shorts and slacks from Italy.

ON LIVING ROOM STEPS she wears Italian shorts and her "old" shirt, bought six months ago in Florence.

WITH SPORTSMAN HUSBAND she leans on family Jaguar in felt coat from Rome worn over suit from Paris.

AMONG OUTSIDE LEAVES in her small garden she wears Brazilian cotton dress which she herself designed.

ON BLACK COUCH in living room Senhora de Souza Campos wears cashmere pants and jersey top from Capri's Emilio Pucci. Sandals are also from Capri, gold jewelry is Brazilian.

FACTS OF LIFE IN FIFE

Dr. William Patterson, who teaches science to schoolchildren at Fife, Scotland, has developed a new twist on an old method of sex education. He has the boys dress up in cardboard costumes as bees and the girls as flowers. The boys then buzz around the girls pantomiming the act of fertilization (above). All the while the children chant jingles like this:

*Here I am an insect fine,
And wonderful to view;
With head, thorax and abdomen,
I am much the same as you.
My head has eyes and feelers too,
My mouth is one long cable;
I have for wings six fine legs
As good as Betty Grable . . .*

*We visit all the pretty flowers
From morn till late at night,
And take the nectar juices sweet
As if it were our right . . .
The seeds have thus been fertilized
And this should make you sing,
For little plants from them will grow
Next year when comes the Spring.*

Race of

"GIANTS!"

1 "A 500-yard dash is murder—especially when you're ten feet tall. And any man is a giant wearing the stilts the shepherds wear at festival time in the south of France," writes Wendy Hilty, famous photographer friend of Canadian Club. "Once a vital part of life for these 'echassiers,' the stilts raise a man four feet above ground. Threading my way through a herd of sheep on stilts was an obstacle race I'll never forget."

2 "Mounting the stilts was more than I could manage alone. The echassiers lie face down and then pull themselves up a 6-foot 'baton' hand over hand. A fall could be dangerous, I was warned—a leg snaps easier than one of these hard pine stilts."

3 "I didn't win the race, but I did get to present the prize, a woolly lamb, to the winner. He was the one who told me how stilt-racing originated. Years ago, when this land was a region of small knolls, the shepherds stood all day on their stilts to spot straying sheep. Today they trot the stilts out only for festivals."

4 "I came down to earth later on when a more familiar sight turned up. The scene was the local cafe in the little village of Brocas. The sight: a bottle of Canadian Club!"

5 "Nowhere else in the world have I seen stiltwalkers like the echassiers I met in Brocas. Canadian Club, on the other hand, is a favorite almost everywhere I go."

Why this whisky's worldwide popularity? Canadian Club is light as scotch, rich as rye, satisfying as bourbon.

Yet it has a distinctive flavor and character that is all its own. You can stay with Canadian Club all evening long... in cocktails before dinner and tall ones afterward. There is one and only one Canadian Club, and no other whisky tastes quite like it in all the world.
